AMONG THE NEWEST BOOKS.

From D. Appleton and Company, New York.

Latitude 19°, by Mrs. Schuyler Crowninshield.

The Impediment, by Dorothea Gerard.

The Story of Life in the Seas, by Sidney J. Hickson.

The Hero of Lake Erie, by James Barnes.

The incredible tale, Latitude 19°, is of San Domingo during its worst conditions of savagery—even not too late for anthropophagy, when there crawled at large the Pythoness said by certain sea-faring folk still to haunt the caves of the Island. Wreckages on the coast and ships in the offing that fly the Stars and Stripes and also flags with cross-bones upon them, ghastly feasts and horrible religious orgies and terrors of the mystic serpent ring, a sight of which produced hysterical mania, are portrayed with a realism that is only a small part of this narrative.

It is claimed that the narrator of so awesome a tale was one of the castaways and that it is not safe to shock readers or listeners with the whole truth of the barbarisms of Haiti and San Domingo, nor yet tell much about appalling scenic beauty that is changed yearly by earthquakes and hurricanes. To read the tale will not inspire a desire for the acquisition of the Island.

Dorothea Gerard tells interesting stories in an interesting fashion. Her latest, The Impediment, is a love romance—wholly that. There is a lover who is shy, plain and rich, and one who is handsome, masterful and not a son of fortune; there are also two pretty girls, one selfish and morbidly remorseful and the other nobly self-effacing. The latter knows what true love is, as readers will find.

So exciting have been the sea-fights with Spain in Oriental and Occidental waters that one might easily forget "The Hero of Erie," Oliver Hazard Perry. Happily, his life and heroic defense of his nation's honor and liberty has been written in a most acceptable manner by James Barnes. There was a time fifty or more years ago when grandfathers and fathers repeated to the young commemorative verses about Perry, the hero, on the anniversary of his victory; but his achievements have been overshadowed. The biography now published, however, should not be missed. The book is one of the series called "Young Heroes of Our Navy."

The Story of Life in the Seas, by Sidney J. Hickson, is a treasury of knowledge that no one could have discovered except through a life work of search. The little book is full of curious and exact information and is generously illustrated. It belongs to "The Library of Useful Stories." The shapes and colors of fish, their modes of breathing and feeding in deep waters, their manners of reproduction and self-protection from natural enemies are all extremely interesting.
