

SUB sold; SU hits paydirt

The Students' Union books are back in the black but drastic measures were taken this week to accomplish this feat.

The Students' Union moved the Students' Union Building (SUB) to Leduc yesterday. The land it formerly stood on has been sold to Edmonton millionaire businessman Peter F. Bucklington.

Bucklington plans to build Gainers' new rendering plant on the site, which he bought for $12 million.

"It's the perfect site," he said yesterday. "Since the university isn't subject to zoning regulations, it doesn't matter what the thing smells like. Ha ha! Those pinko bureaucrats at city hall can't touch me this time."

Bucklington, resplendent in his black cape and top hat, and twirling his pencil-thin mustache, said he didn't expect objections from students and faculty members to be serious.

"The noise and smell from my rendering plant won't even compare to the ruckus and the stench from the student residence (Lister Hall) down the street."

Students' Union president Nolan Nastey was overjoyed by the sale.

"Money money money money money," he said. "This money should be at least enough to erase our current debt and offset info desk losses through the next six months."

Nastey says he doesn't think relocating SUB to Leduc will lessen student use of the building.

"Nobody ever goes there anyway," he said. "I don't think this will hamper our operations in any way. I do plan to make the trip to the university at least once every couple of months, to keep in touch."

Higher executive transportation costs will be offset by rental of the seventh floor of SUB to the Edmonton International Airport as a backup control tower.

Bucklington says the deal is part of his new respectability campaign.

"After building my fortune on mafia ties (and matching handkerchiefs), I decided it was time to make my selfless contribution to the community," he said. "Bailing out the Students' Union is just that kind of contribution."

Nastey is planning a "meet the millionaire" evening in honor of Bucklington.

Brawl costs U liquor licence

by "Blood and Guts" Barrett

A bloody brawl at the Faculty Club has cost the U of A its liquor licence.

The brawl broke out after a disagreement between two members of the Board of Governors at a Board luncheon at the posh club Friday.

"That place was ripped apart," says ALCB chairman Rickey Mickey. "It made those Dinwoodie cabarets look like playschool."

Eyewitnesses said the bloodbath started when Board of Governors chairman John Slosler called Board member Dotty Richards a "silly feminist bitch."

Richards, aghast, burst into tears. But president and former Golden Gloves champion "Mighty Myer" Horrorwitz gallantly sprang to her defense and knocked Slosler silly.

Suddenly, the whole room erupted in violence.

"Food fight! Food fight!" chanted dozens of wild-eyed profs who began throwing their plates of gourmet food across the tables.

Soon the air was thick with the aroma of potatoes au gratin and lobster thermidor as the buffet tables were overturned onto a group of history professors by three engineering profs.

Five ambulances, three police paddy wagons and 15 fat men in ill-fitting green leisure suits (allegedly Campus Security officers) were eventually called in to the scene to clean up the mess.

The episode had a sad side, however, when philosophy professor Burton Russell swallowed his pipe in the excitement and choked to death.

About 100 drug-related arrests were made at the scene, city police say.

In other Board of Governors business Friday, the new Code of Student Behaviour was approved unanimously.

From an upcoming "surprise" announcement by Premier Lougheed, leaked in advance to the Getaway.

After having had our social consciousness raised by Ms. Thomson's cogent and persuasive column "Aspidistra", we, the Conservative Party caucus, have unanimously decided to join the NDP. All power to the People!

From the Pope's 1980 Christmas address:

I greatly enjoyed the article and letters in Getaway defending the religious rights of homosexuals. It has always been my opinion that if the Catholic Church can accept sexual abstinence, it can accept other abominations as well.

From an editorial by Tony Perkins, Honorary President of the Society of Perverts, Exhibitionists, Rapists and Madmen, in their monthly magazine Drool.

The members of SPERM were deeply moved by the Getaway story on women reclaiming the night. We hereby apologize for any unpleasantness we may have caused, and promise to be on our best behaviour in the future.

G.B. Trudeau, quoted in a profile in People magazine.

When William F. Buckley wrote his laudatory introduction to Doonesbury's Greatest Hits, it shook up a few people. But since I took out a subscription to Getaway no one has dared accuse me of harboring right-wing heresies.

...and, of course, whenever I run out of cartoon ideas, I always lift a few from Mr. Muzz, Mr. Skeet and Mr. Pasken.

Poland invaded

In a story datelined Warsaw, the Reuters News Agency this morning alleged that troops representing the nations of the Warsaw Pact had invaded Poland. This is not in itself a serious development, and we don't want to concern you. So forget we even mentioned it, okay? Have a Merry Christmas.
