

U.N.B. BAND PRACTISES

PLANS AWAIT NEW INSTRUMENTS

Pictured is the University Band. The present strength of the band is approximately twenty-five members, most of whom have had previous band experience. There remain, however, many musicians in the college who, due to the lack of an instrument cannot take part. This situation will be rectified in the near future as delivery of a complete set of band instruments purchased by Lord Beaverbrook is expected shortly.

Plans for the future are for a forty-five piece band that will be able to play at all college occasions and sports events.

The repertoire will include not only marches but also light classical selections and modern popular tunes. The band's conductor Mr. Trythall has made it known that he plans to have the band learn precision marching and drill formations.

It is hoped that, when the band reaches full strength that it will become an important part of college activities and help to make UNB more music conscious.

NEWS SLANTS . . .

Mike Pearson, in a recent speech at a dinner in Ottawa, carried out a mental exercise to demonstrate how various newspapers might interpret a single happening. The hypothetical situation was another planet hurtling towards earth with total destruction within a few days.. Mike might have included the following:

- The Daily Gleaner: "In these fearful hours we are standing by our ties with the Empire."
- Foreign Affairs: "The recent development did not come as a surprise to us."
- The Daily Worker: "Workers arise, you have nothing to lose, Period."
- Bank of Montreal Economic Report: "The Canadian economy is progressing steadily with only minor cyclical fluctuations expected."
- Christian Science Monitor: "This has come as a direct result of man's scientific meddling in the affairs of the universe."
- Life: "As Life will not be on the newstand next week we will not be able to bring you action-packed photos of the catastrophe."
- The Catholic Register: "More and more people are using the Rosary."
- CBC News: "There has been a change in the programming for CBC Wednesday night. Handel's "Messiah" will be heard instead of a report on construction of the St. Lawrence Seaway."
- Awake: "This should have happened long ago."
- SPCA Bulletin: "This shouldn't happen to a dog."

EngineEars

by Red 'N Black

"Where's The Bulldozer?" some 500 engineers are asking. Look closely—EngineEars, alias The Bulldozer, is your engineering column under a new title. We have been meditating for some time (yes, even engineers can meditate) about a more related name for (y)our column. Finally, some inspired fellow engineer suggested EngineEars. Since we are the ears of the engineering faculty, EngineEars seems very fitting. Hope you like it.

The spirited smoker held last week gave the engineers the opportunity to get together for a stimulating social evening. Although statistics as to the course of events are somewhat lacking, we did manage to learn that the third year civil engineers received a free quart of beer each. Congratulations, boys, for having the highest engineering percentage in the recent blood donor clinic. During the early part of the evening records showed that the seniors had consumed some 96 quarts, the sophomores—75. To quote one who knows: "I just lost track after that!" An exhilarating discussion must have taken place sometime that evening, for our Engineering Society President has been sporting a beautiful shiner ever since. What happened, Dave?

Don't forget that the contest for the drawing of a free engineering jacket closes on the 30th. 90 jackets must be sold by that time to make the contest valid. Contact the engineering store for details. Monday, the 19th, is the date of the next Engineering Society meeting. See you there.

Caustic Comment

no longer in practice but we feel that when U.N.B. boys start dressing and acting as gentlemen they will find that the opposite sex will behave accordingly.

Now to come to the drinking habits of Co-Eds. To quote: "Who are you taking to the dance?" ".....", she's stunned as hell, doesn't drink, doesn't smoke and doesn't swear but it was too late to get anybody else."

Yes, they do say that! So if you think that girls should or should not drink in moderation let it be known! At U.N.B., once it becomes known that a girl drinks at all, unless she is of sterling character, she immediately has a bad reputation, and this is utter nonsense.

The Co-Eds are terrific. It is time that the male students realized that it is themselves, who leave a little to be desired.

the Kent Inn which was attended by Brig. J. R. B. Jones, officer commanding, N.B. Area. Wednesday morning the group visited Camp Gagetown before leaving for Mount Allison University.

APOLOGY!

The Brunswickan apologizes for the fact that it has again been unable to obtain pictures of two of the Co-ed representatives on the Students Council. Pam McCready won the spot as senior Co-ed representative, and Peggy Colpitts the place as Co-ed representative for the Sophomore Class.

S. C. M.

Talk of war darkens the sky these days, and it is well to know where we, as Christian students, stand.

This Sunday at "Open House" there will be an opportunity to better appraise and comprehend this horror that is war, when the Rev. Earl McKnight speaks on the topic: "The Christian's Attitude toward War."

The talk will be made with an eye to the existing world situation, and will touch on such aspects as the role of the U.N. in these matters, and the notion of a solution by force.

Discussion will follow.

Before the talk there will be a singsong, afterward a short devotional service, and the programme will conclude with refreshments. We extend a cordial welcome to all students.

The time: 8.30, Nov. 18.

The place: George St. Baptist Church.
