THE NOMADES OF THE WEST.

287

nething of the spirit ich made,

, but adall for her f waist, a e form of Conrad, void in

e beauty, urance in singular sition to intents, depend heir own idemned

e drawn together in closer familiarity, day by day, that they should make, as it were, a mutual league against the future, and ample amends for the past, by linking their hearts together in a child-like love? Surely not.