A PLEA FOR THE RED CROSS FUND
Our Boys in France

For two whole long years the tramp, tramp, tramp, of our Canadian boys has been heard in France. On they still march, the happy, merry, splendid fellows, in a ceaseless army. At the call of duty, wherever there is a work to be done, the boys are always ready and they have achieved such splendid results that the term "Canadian" is a passport in all military quarters.

In the fearful discomfit of the trenches, with water waist deep, with mud surrounding them, and living creatures all about them; there they stand, and guard the trenches, and watch for the appearance of the enemy, and woe to the Boche who puts his head over the parapet, for a sure marksman is our Canadian boy. Letters from the front tell us of difficult positions assailed and taken by our Canadian Boys with a courage and daring unsurpassed.

Their's not to reason why Their's but to do or die."

The Canadian Boys are found in all departments of military work, from the digging of trenches to the young lieutenant, "flying in the air" taking his part in the newest art of warfare, "a charge of aeroplanes" of which it is said, "that no man living can possibly describe." Very often these boys don't come back, these brave boys who are dancing with death a thousand feet in the air, not all glide back to earth again alive, maimed bodies are tenderly lifted from the broken machine; many others, still and dead, with tense hands still grasping the lever, are reverently removed from their machines and so the grim work goes on and the Canadian boy, seems to be saying:

"What though I die, if when the strife is over, Men may agree, to study war no more."

Other positions are filled, equally dangerous, but all showing the same invincible courage.

Staff officers are represented, skilled surgeons saving precious lives; chaplains cheering the wounded and dying. Ambulance drivers, stretcher-bearers, rendering first aid, and bravely daring shot and shell to bring in safely the wounded comrade. Bomb throwers, machine gunners, swift riding messengers, and many other positions, have all been taken part in by our Canadian boys.

Distinguished conduct medals and several V.C.'s are proudly worn by our boys.

Many Canadian homes have been saddened and many of our soldier boys will never come home again, Heaven has opened for them, they are wearing the immortal crown, and French peasant cover these lowly graves "Somewhere in France," with fair bright flowers. The memory of these boys will be cherished as part of the nation's history and their names will be preserved on enduring monuments, and the history of this brave sacrifice, will inspire many to follow their example, and do their share in this terrible strife.

Mothers and sisters, wives and sweethearts, all do your share to keep the "boys" in the comforts you have brought them up to be necessary to their existence. The "Red Cross" army grows. Socks, mufflers, woollen clothing, cakes, sweets, and tobacco, all go to help ease the soldiers' life, let us do our share, so that when the Canadian boys come marching home, from the victorious strife, we may with a good conscience "Have the home fires burning. The bells ringing. The flags waving. The bon-fires blazing."

All in honor of the brave Canadian boys who left home and friends to do their splendid bit for King and Country.

An Interesting Relic

A missal, or altar book, printed in 1720 and in use in Annapolis at the time of and for many years before the expulsion of the Acadians (the book from which Mass was said for the Acadians) is now to be seen on one of the tables of St. Thomas' library. It is still in a very good state of preservation and its print is as clear as the day it came from the press. The book was lost for a time after the expulsion, but was recovered by the first Archbishop of Halifax who wrote his name in it, and it has now found its way back to the community in which it was originally owned and used, to be treasured as a relic of the past.—Spectator.
