PRINCIPLE OF TELEPATHY.

How Information is Conveyed From One Mind to Another.

Not only is it possible to transmit messages from one place to another by means of wireless, but it is possible on occasions for one mind to communicate with another distant mind without the employment of any apparatus whatever, writes Elliott O'Donnell in Pearson's Weekly.

That is what we mean by telepathy. Telepathy is purely mental. It is carried on quite independently of all the organs of the body, saving the brain, and yet it enables us to receive from afar impressions of thoughts, feelings, visions, taste and sounds. It is entirely a matter of concentration.

One of the most remarkable cases of what certainly appears to have been telepathic communication was that of Mrs. Hawker, wife of the famous aviator. It will be remembered that when news first came to hand that the daring aviator was missing, the whole country, with one exception, feared the worst, and that exception was Mrs. Hawker. She was never in doubt as to her husband's safety, because at the very critical moment when his life was in the greatest danger, messages came to her saying that all was right and that he was alive and well. The only explanation of these messages seems to lie in telepathy; there was certainly no other medium for transmitting them.

A curious case was that of a certain priest who disputed the rights of anyone in a village near Paris to a particular field. A farmer bought it, and the priest determined to make him relinquish it through the instrumentality of what was in reality telepathy. Accordingly, he put a wooden cross in the field, to which he affixed a paper bearing on it the words: "If you put your spade into this field a specter will come and torment you in the night."

The farmer, taking no notice of the cross, overturned it, and sure enough that night and for many subsequent nights was tormented by a figure in white that entered his room and said: "Give me back my field."

Finally, the farmer grew ill, a doctor was summoned, and it then transpired that it was all due to the priest, who, at the very time the farmer used to see and hear the figure in white, was repeating the very words, "Give me back my field," that the farmer had heard so continually. It was done solely by concentration. But it is not only sounds that can be conveyed by telepathy, but taste as well.

Dr. Elliottson narrates how, in the presence of the Archbishop of Dublin and several other persons, he experimented on a certain Mrs. Snelling. Standing behind Mrs. Snelling, so that she could not see him, Dr. Elliottson put various substances in his mouth—salt, sugar, cinnamon, ginger, and so on, all of which were carefully concealed with blotting paper and handed to him by a Mr. Sparlett, eldest son of Lord Abinger. Each time an article was put in his mouth and he began to taste it, Mrs. Snelling called out and described what she fancied she tasted and every time her description tallied exactly with what Dr. Elliottson had in his mouth.

A Finished Product. "Don't count your chickens before they are hatched," replied Mr. Erasmus Pinkley. "De fact is, I don't pay no 'tention to 'em till dey's done growed several months."

Pains About the Heart

ANY derangement of the heart's action is alarming. Frequently pains about the heart are caused by the formation of gas arising from indigestion.

Relief from this condition is obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Chronic indigestion results from sluggish liver action, constipation of the bowels and inactive kidneys.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills arouse these organs to activity they thoroughly cure indigestion and overcome the many annoying symptoms.
