Is there a feeling like a heavy load upon the stomach? Sometimes a faint, all-over sensation at the pit of the stomach, which food does not satisfy? Are your eyes rankled? Do your limbs and feet become cold and clammy? Is there a giddiness, a sort of whirling sensation in the head when rising up suddenly? Are the whites of your eyes tinged with yellow? Is your urine nearly and high colored? Does it deposit a sediment after standing?

Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Green lived on adjoining lots in St. John's twenty-nine days before they discovered they were sisters. And yet people say women tell all they know the first time they meet.

It is astonishing how rapidly the feeble and debilitated gain strength and vigor when taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is a powerful, but perfectly safe medicine.

"When a girl gets mad and rises from a fellow's knee," says an exchange, "but thinks better of it, and goes back again, that's what we call a relapse."

The use of calomel for derangement of the liver has ruled many a fine constitution. Those who, for similar troubles, have tried Ayer's Pills testify to their efficacy in thoroughly remedying the malady, without injury to the system.

A lady who advertised for a girl "to do light house-keeping" received a letter from an applicant who said her light-house was situated.

Mothers.
Castoria is recommended by physicians for children teething. It is a purely vegetable preparation, its ingredients are published on each bottle. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, regulates the bowels, quiet pain, cures diarrhoea and wind colic, alleviates feverishness, destroys worms, and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mother's friend. 35 doses, 35 cents.

According to the Bee Journal there are in North America about 300,000 persons keeping bees. The annual honey product is about 100,000,000 pounds; and yet the American citizen has to put up with glucose when he goes out to buy a pound of honey.

Tramp: I know it, ma'am; I'm always out of work, but it's all my poor luck. Woman: How is that, poor man? Tramp: It's this way, ma'am: In the winter I feel like rowing a boat, and in the summer I just actually crave to shovel snow, and nature continually walks me. Have you such a thing as a pie in the house?

To the request of the eloquent Dr. Hawkes for an increase of salary, giving as his reason that his family expenses were increasing, an officer of the Church replied: "Do not trouble yourself; the Lord has promised that He will care for the young ravens when they cry."

"I know that," replied the witty minister, "but nothing is said about the young Hawkes."

Farm and Household.

TAKE YOUR WIFE INTO PARTNERSHIP.

No good man ever made a mistake by taking his wife into a business partnership on business principle as he would anybody else. We never knew a man to make a failure of sheep raising with his wife as a partner. Somewhere the sheep did better. They were more likely to be taken care of. The lambs did not get at them. The dogs did not get chilled and if they did they seemed to come around all right under a woman's treatment. The wool always went to market in shape to bring the best price. The butchers like to buy mutton from such folks, and they often pay more for it because the wife or the girls bated to see their pets sold or go away to be killed and eaten up. And whether a woman is present to insist upon this better price or not the good man can make this a reason for a little more price and get it too. It is said "Mary had a little lamb," and that she had a loving disposition. No small importance may be attributed to the ownership of the lamb. We are not told what her income was nor to what purpose she applied it. But we dare to guess with what anxiety and tender solicitude she carried for that lamb that the "deceit as white as snow" should find enough money to meet the expenses of a pleasant surprise for mamma. We are told that she had a sewing machine and a broom, and for not a cent of it went for another purpose. A share in the sheep makes the wife a better wife, a better mother a better neighbor a better woman.

Just try this one year and see. Don't let her give her money to start the flock with. Make the proposition to her and see how she will find the way of managing the twenty, thirty or forty dollars to furnish her share to start on. She will do it easier than you can! If you can't raise the money she will help you to get it and go security on the note. Nobody would hesitate to take such a note. They always pay on time. Many a household would be more cheerful if the wife had such an interest out of doors. No share in a family of rough boys as a leading girl has fully met the business idea of a sensible enterprising wife. She will lead her children all the better to ways of industry, virtue and economy with a share in some sheep or other means of an income.

PREVENTING FIRES ON THE FARM.

The hot dry weather makes litter, easily combustible. Even the growing grass is so dry that it will readily ignite. The farm hand should not be allowed to walk about the farm with a pipe; the live ashes, blown from it, may ignite the grass, or the dry litter in the fence corner, or the stubble. It is not an infrequent thing for a string of fence to be burned by a spark igniting the dry grass and litter of the fence row, for a spark to start the stable fire, sweeping on to destruction of the stacks and buildings. Certainly at a season a lighted pipe should not be allowed near any of the stacks or buildings. We very much doubt if a lighted pipe is ever allowed on a farm. Though the smoker does not walk he smokes, he is not, and not the effect was magical. It seemed to stamp out the ashes that he kneels from his pipe.

To a low child to play with fire, or to have matches, is manifestly so foolishly that it need only be mentioned. It is too careless to think of it, and it is too common to coat pocket; for the coat or vest may be thrown down on a bunch of hay or straw or on dry litter, and then the tread of an animal, or the gnawing of mice, may ignite the matches and start a destructive conflagration. If stable is to be burned, it is better to start the fire against the wind if the stable is quite dry, although a fire guard has been placed. We know a young farmer, working hard, got a farm and home paid for, who burned up last season eight tons of first-class hay; he played a guard forty feet wide around a large stable field, and started the fire before the wind. It swept over the guard, and went on to the hay racks. Fortunately a large threshing crew was near by, and by a hard effort the fire was stopped.—AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

THE HIGHWAY COW.

Few objects are more to be pitied than the highway cow. Her fare is scanty, and her lot hard and abusive. She must steal or starve, and her looks show that she is conscious of being a thief. Her owner cares little for her, and by all others she is hated. Her food and treatment being what they are, she connot be profitable to anyone, and to the owner of land in her vicinity she is a source of vexation and loss. Why she exists no one can tell, for if it were not for her three-fourths of the feeding now required would not be needed; this saving pay for good pastures for her, not to speak of the creation of the damage to crops. The principle which allows her to exist is wrong; it is contrary to that which once prevailed in the English law; it requires each-holder to fence all other men's cows out, instead of his in. The law is wrong, not the highway cow. Hence do not abuse her, though she is exasperating. When she has eaten off all your cabbage, or destroyed bushes of your ripening wheat, do not put the dog on her, and let her utter her unmerciful when you get her in a corner, but make a study resolve that you will vote against animals running at large. Here as elsewhere prevention is better than cure.—AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

KILLING WEEDS ON LAWNS.

A writer says: I have been experimenting with petroleum, with a view to ascertain whether or not it will kill such low rooted plants as dandelion, thistles, plantain, etc., and find it quite effectual. A little petroleum poured out of a can used as a long spotted one—into the crown of the plants, kills them out. Of course, a larger quantity is required to kill strong, old plants, than is necessary for young ones. A few drops will kill daisies and it will kill the grass, too, so that care is required not to allow what is given to go beyond the crown of the plant it is intended to destroy. With this simple remedy at hand, those who have big weeds on their lawns need not be troubled much longer.—Rural.

We have never yet met a farmer who knew too much. A little knowledge is a dangerous thing because with some of a concealed mind it makes them think they know all. In fact, they know nothing. A physician if he can secure the service of a better, or of an unfinished and unexperienced lawyer, because a mistake made may involve serious consequences and the loss of a life or lawsuit. It is so with us all. The farmers must not alone know how to raise the raw materials on the farm, but when that has been successfully and profitably done he must be able to turn manufacturer and convert raw material into manufactured goods, such as beef and pork and lard, and then become a merchant-trader and sell his goods to the consumer. He must be a successful trader and handle his money to advantage. He, moreover, requires a knowledge of animal pathology, so as to be able to treat his stock, and of chemistry so as to know the composition of his soils.

The birds are among the farmer's best friends and companions. Nothing adds more to the charms of his country home or to the delight of his wife and children than the trees and the flowers and the birds, and best of these are the birds because without them insect life would soon develop to such an extent as to destroy the other. What folly then, what utter stupidity to permit the idle and childish habit of so called sportsmen to shoot every bird that comes in sight? Is it not about time this thing was stopped?

Best of All.

Cough medicines, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is in greater demand than ever. No preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable to the taste, and so widely known as this. It is the family medicine in thousands of households.

I have suffered for years from a bronchitis, and whenever I caught cold or an exposure to inclement weather, I was troubled with a very annoying tickling sensation in the throat and with difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none done so well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which always gives prompt relief in return of my old complaint.—Ernest A. Hepler, Inspector of Public Roads, Parish Terrebonne, La.

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults.—Mrs. Samuel Briggs, Waukegan, Ill.

Twenty years ago I was troubled with a disease of the lungs, doctors affecting me with relief and consolation, my case hopeless. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and before I had used a bottle, I found relief, and continued to take this medicine until a Cherry Pectoral saved my life.—Samuel Briggs, Waukegan, Ill.
