

ment was adopted, and a further one of Mr. Langelier to include "the books published in any country" clause four, as amended was then adopted and the committee took up clause nine. Mr. McCarthy argued that the house should adjourn, as a good night's work had been done. Sir Charles Tupper said he appreciated the progress which had been made, but in view of the state of public business it was impossible to accede to Mr. McCarthy's request. Mr. Sutherland protested against Sir Charles Tupper's announcement.

A motion that the committee should rise was made by Mr. Fraser shortly after 2 o'clock Friday morning. Mr. Fraser continued talking until three o'clock, when Sir Richard Cartwright, in his most insinuating manner, took the floor. Sir Richard discussed the January cabinet crisis and accused the government of obstruction. Hon. Mr. Ives replied: "Sir said he 'there are only at the most about eight clauses of this Bill requiring any particular amendment, the remainder being clauses of a merely technical character. Therefore I contend there is still time enough (the session does not end for fourteen days yet) to pass this bill and the supplementary estimates as well, if the opposition will only be 'business'." Now, what is the position? The McCarthyites, who constitute the only real opponents of the remedial legislation, have left the chamber.

(Hear, hear.) And upon whom did the duty of obstruction devolve? It was Sir Richard Cartwright leading the way, and he made better progress than perhaps could be effected with a full house. The minister of public works has handed me a marked copy of the bill, continued Hon. Mr. Ives, which shows that besides those already passed there are but three clauses of this bill upon which there needs any discussion, and these might be laid over for further consideration while those should be put through. If the members of the liberal party from Quebec would use the influence which they might use, they could force those honorable gentlemen who are led by political considerations to obstruct the bill, they could force the party to change its course. But where is the honorable member for Hanington? Dr. Landierk—Where every honest man should be at four o'clock in the morning, in his bed. From which observation, I take it, continued Mr. Ives, that you are not one of those honest men. (Cheers and laughter.) But I ask in all sincerity where is the honorable member who represents a county where more than one-third of the population are Roman Catholics? If he want in earnest to the honorable gentleman who leads his party at present and insisted upon the principle that the people of Quebec demand justice for their co-religionists in Manitoba, and if the more liberal members from Quebec joined him in that reasonable demand, upon their party and parliament the policy of doing justice to the minority of Manitoba. (Cheers.) Mr. Ives concluded by calling upon the member for Hanington to help the government to do the duty imposed upon it in securing justice for the Manitoba minority. As doubtless our faithful and unswerving Mr. Scriver was somewhat of a member, but in his stead the member for Wellington took the floor. That was at 5 a. m. After Mr. McMillen came Mr. Belley, who severely denounced his compatriots for abetting the McCarthy-Laurier combine in their obstructive tactics. The discussion was continued by Messrs. Gibson, Borden and Ferguson, who challenged Dr. Borden's statement as to the unhealthfulness of the common chamber. Mr. Patterson (Brant) made reference to the alleged absence of members of the Government, which, he said, was responsible for the committee's not proceeding with the bill. Hon. Mr. Daly replied that he was ready to answer any question regarding the bill so soon as the motion to rise was disposed of. Mr. Patterson admitted his inability to do so. Then he continued for an hour to defend the Quebec liberals. Mr. Wallace followed, speaking until 9:30. Mr. McMillan taut d Mr. Laurier with ever having denied the statement that he had said that he had thanked God there were no rebels in the liberal ranks. Mr. Laurier at once rose and said he would answer. He had said, he said, on the floor of parliament more than once that he would not be responsible for any words attributed to him in any newspaper unless that speech purporting to be verbatim. No verbatim report of his child in the house had been taken and printed. It was not fair, therefore, to ask him to be answerable for the imperfect or garbled newspaper reports. Mr. McMillan said Mr. Laurier did not say he had used the words attributed to him. Mr. Belley—I affirm that Mr. Laurier said the words, and I can produce fifty people to prove it, and Mr. Belley—If any one says that he says a lie. Loud cries of order, withdrawal, and general confusion. The chairman—The honorable gentleman must withdraw. Mr. Belley—I have nothing to take back, and won't take it back. (Uproar.) The chairman—The honorable gentleman will have to take it back. (Government cheers.) Mr. Belley—I Mr. Laurier will deny he said those words I will accept his declaration a county where more than one-third of the population are Roman Catholics? If he want in earnest to the honorable gentleman who leads his party at present and insisted upon the principle that the people of Quebec demand justice for their

The chairman—Mr. Choquette must take back the word "lie." Dr. Belger—I move that Mr. Choquette's words be taken down. Mr. Choquette—I have no objection. Then there was further uproar, during which Mr. Casey essayed to repeat Mr. Laurier said the words. Mr. Belley—I say this—I affirm that Mr. Laurier uttered the words imputed to him, and I defy him to dispute them. Mr. Laurier—I have never said those words. Mr. Belley—He said so at the meeting, and heard me use the words I would request Mr. Choquette to withdraw his statement. If he did not hear me then the ringing of the chair must be different. Messrs. Davies and Cartwright rose simultaneously, when Mr. Belley said "The heavenly twins," and then there was an explosion of laughter. The chairman said he misunderstood Mr. Belley. He thought that honorable gentleman had said he had heard Mr. Laurier say those words. However, the matter would be settled if Mr. Choquette would say that Mr. Belley was misinformed. Mr. Laurier thereupon asked Mr. Choquette to withdraw the expression. Mr. Choquette—Well, Mr. Chairman, I will say that Mr. Belley has been misinformed, and the man who told him told him the truth. (Laughter.) Now, what is Mr. Fraser's motion for the committee to rise was negatived, and the consideration of clause ten was taken up.

The same obstructive tactics were continued all day Saturday and Sunday night. About a quarter to twelve Sir Charles Tupper intimated to the member who then had his innings at the time-killing business, that if he did not stop he would be responsible for his own arrest. Mr. Tupper then proceeded to his seat. With this the obstructionist collapsed and on motion of Sir Charles the committee rose. The report of the Winnipeg school conference and the supplementary estimates were laid on the table. Sir Charles Tupper moved the adjournment of the house, at the same time stating that when the house met on Monday consideration of the remedial bill would be resumed. Thus came to a close the longest continuous parliamentary sitting in this or any other country. It lasted continuously from Monday afternoon until midnight Saturday, with the exception of two hours for dinner each evening, 120 hours.

We would again remind our readers of the lecture on the "Destiny of Canada," to be delivered by Hon. D. Laird in St. Patrick's Hall, on Monday evening next. All lovers of our country should make it a point to present to hear his splendid lecture. Make no other engagement for Monday evening.

In the Imperial House of Commons on Monday last, the Irish Land Bill was introduced, and its provisions were explained by Gerald Balfour. It is described as a comprehensive and sweeping measure, altogether in the interests of the tenant. April 27th has been fixed as the date of the second reading.

As the general intention of the devotion of the League of the Cross for the month of April is the "Catholic Press," the article under the same caption, from the pen of Walter Leake, which we reproduce on our first page, comes in most opportune to comment on the central proposal of our readers. The circumstances detailed to be the writer are by any means peculiar to the United States.

In consequence of the Stanley being prevented from crossing several days last week, the mail was delayed at the Cape. The first mail by the Cape came early on Saturday another mail by the same route reached here between nine and ten o'clock in the evening. So that we had no less than three foreign mails on Saturday, two by the Cape and one by the Stanley. The latter to equal matters, as we had not had any for some days before.
