Caused by a Man Who Dives Down 95 Feet Into a Tank of Water.

Caused by a Man Who Dives Down 95
Feet Into a Tank of Water.

London's latest thrill is derived from the feat of a man who dives down 95 feet from the roof of the Westminster Aquarium into a narrow and comparatively shallow tank of water set in the floor of the building. The exploit calls for an astounding combination of nerve and skill, and is far more noteworthy than any of the bridge-jumping acts which have been so tirescomely frequent of late years.

The diver is Thomas Burns, who has acquired considerable notoriety as a diver from bridges and as an expert swimmer, and not a little fame from his having saved no fewer than 32 lives during his career. He is a sturdity-built man, some 26 years of age. He has frequently dived from bridges over 100 feet high into rivers, but his dive at the Aquarium is a very different affair. He stands on a tiny platform suspended among the iron girders of the root, 95 feet above the floor, and sees below him, instead of a broad, deep river, a mass of flaring, be wildering lights, a sea of upturned faces, and in the wooden floor of the stage what seems from that height to be a mere slot, the tank which he must surely land in. The tank is eighteen feet long, eight feet wide and seven feet deep. The diver actually dives, takes a header, and does not drop feet foremost, after the manner of the bridge jumpers. The marvelous precision required to land in the tank is easily appreciable, as is also the fate that would be fall him should he miss his mark.

Burns is hoisted up to his aerial perch by means of a rope and pulley. The spectators can barely discen him through that distance of perpendicular space. They see him peer over the platform edge, then they see his toes project over, he crouches down, and then he glides off the platform head foremost, and comes plunging down with stiffly outstretched arms, and hands meeting in front of him in regular "header" fashion. But when little more than half-way down his feet fall over his back toward his head, he turns almost completely over, accompaniment to the dive has voiced itself, he strikes the water with his shoulders and back with a prodiglous thad. He skims just under the surface of the water, seeming barely to enter it, and comes up face upward. He scarcely breathes hard after the tremendous exploit, and goes off immediately to give an exhibition of fancy swimming in another part of the building. The wonderful skill, the superb pluck and the unmistakable element of danger involved in the feat, together with the not remote prospect of a horrible catastrophe, bring crowds to behold this latest sensation.

Chicago's Mayoralty Contest. CHICAGO, April 4.—Carter H. Harrison was to-day chosen mayor of Chicago by a majority of 19,000 and the entire Demomajority of 19,000 and the entire Demo-cratic ticket elected by majorities rang-ing from 16,000 to 19,000. The con-test for the World's Fair mayor-alty was one of extreme bitterness. The Democratic newspapers, excepting only the Times, which is owned by Mr. Harrison, were in favor of Mr. Hesing. Samuel Wallerton was the Republican candidate. The People's Party, represent-ing the laboring classes, nominated Dewitt C. Cregier for mayor, while the Socialists had for their candidate Henry Ehrenpreis.

A few weeks ago this baby sister was very ill; the doctor attended it from day to day, but the little one remained weak and puny. Clara, whose perceptive faculties were very keen, said to her mother one day: "Mamma, I feel sure that baby can were very keen, said to her mether one day: "Mamma, I feel sure that baby can be made well by using that Lactated Food, about which so many people speak. You remember what doctor said about sister having indigestion, do you not? Well, that reminded me of what I was told in school some months ago by Susie _____; she said her aunt's baby was made well and strong after it was fed on Lactated Food. Do, dear mamma, try this food; I think it will do baby so much good!"

The kind and auxious mother did consent to try the Lactated Food; its use for a few days proved it a success. Father, mother, and gentle Clara were delighted with the wonderful results; and in a few months' time baby was bright and healthy looking, and the dear mother was enabled to cast off all auxiety and fear.

In this way Clara truly helped her mother, and saved her baby sister. There are to-day in Canada thousauds of girls who know what Lactated Food can do, having seen its good effects in the home. These girls can in a quiet way recommend Lactated Food to mothers who have not tried it.

A True Story.

A gentleman well known in literary and social circles of New York entered an elevated car the other day, and took his seat beside a lady who chanced to be an acquaintance. After a few minutes conversation, he said:

"You remember when I met you on an L car about a dozen days ago you were reading The Youth's Companion; I told you I had never happened to read it, and you insisted on my taking yours."

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, I must tell you an amusing story. I took the paper home and read it. That evening an English political question was discussed at my club. I had just read a mighty clear editorial on that very question in The Companion, and I straightened things out for the crowd. A few days late I was with some professional gentlement and a certain scientific topic came up about which they were a little at sea. I suddenly remembered I had also read an article by some specialist in that same Companion which covered the point, and I astonished them by my familiarity with such an authority.

This story has special point in view of the brilliant programme The Companion announces for the entertainment of its more than half million readers during 1893.

The sum of $6,500 was awarded for seven prize stories which will appear. Besides, among its contributors are nearly all the leading story-writers in America, together with a striking array of statesmen, generals, historians, scientists and travelers of worldwide fame. It comes every weak in the year and costs only $1.75 for the 52 weeks. Address, The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.
