His Lordship congratulated the jury upon the hight criminal dockes and explained the law relative to larceny, mucder, seduction, etc. He believed that considerable impetus had been given to the new courts movement by the last Grand Jury's presentment. Relative to Senator Gowan's statement touching the abolition of the Grand Jury system, His Lordship falled to discern where the aving in expense would dome in it such a system were adopted. He disapproved the idea of referving bills to a procurator-fiscal after the method adopted it Scotland, and claimed that some man would be as susceptible to prajudice as the 23 of which the Grand Jury consists. The movement to a bolish the evils of the prison system was also considered. Young prisoners awaking trial owners existed for the classification of criminals. By such means the youthful prisoner was led to vice and crime and thus stapped out of look into this matter.
