

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

Do not press your children too much during their early years on the subject of religion. Show them, by your example, that it is the object of your reverence, but suffer their religious principles to form gradually, as their understandings open. Do not make religion appear a burden to them; do not let them see religion clothed in a dress repulsive to their youthful minds. To insure its making a good impression on them, let it be clothed in its native colours of attraction. Study to make them regard it as an object of veneration, but, at the same time, what it truly is, as a source of cheerfulness and joy. Do not let them regard the Sabbath a day of gloom and restraint. Take them with you to the house of God, and accustom them to regard the institutions of religion with reverence, do not compel them, during the rest of the day, to remain within the walls of your house. Allow them the reasonable indulgence of air and exercise—an indulgence useful to their health, rational in itself, and no way inconsistent with their religious character, while the refusal of that indulgence has just the effect of making them regard the return of that day as a day of penance and mortification, instead of hailing it as a day of joy.
