

Bishop Mountain, and visiting Sherbrooke, he was admitted to priest's orders at the same time as the Rev. W. Dawes. The names of both of these ministers are prominently connected with the early history of the Episcopal Church in this province. In their death they were not divided, for both died from the ship fever, which they contracted while in attendance upon the immigrants in 1847.

Mr. Willoughby did excellent work in initiating the operations of the school society while Mr. Dawes filled the office of secretary of the Diocesan Church Society with earnestness and ability from the time of its organization until his death. Captain Lloyd, of the Royal Navy, a close friend of the Rev. Mr. Willoughby, was taken ill a few days congregation of Trinity Church was also taken to the cemetery and re-erected.

The death of the Rev. Mr. Willoughby was followed by that of four other clergymen of the diocese, besides Mr. John Crispo, clerk of the church, and William Ogden, who, with Captain Lloyd, were lay readers and were studying for the ministry at the time, all being members of the same church.

DISTINGUISHED ADHERENTS.

While the British troops were stationed in Montreal the officers of the various regiments worshipped, usually at Trinity Church. Among the pewholders the following names will be interesting to mention: The Earl of Erroll, Col. Napier, Col. Campbell, General Gore and General Evans.

Who ministered in all three churches.

before him and he also soon died. The Rev. Mr. Willoughby was buried in the old Dorchester street burying ground, his funeral sermon being preached in Trinity Church by the Rev. W. B. Bond (now Lord Archbishop) who also did heroic work among the sufferers, but providentially escaped the plague. It is recorded that His Grace was ordained as priest in Trinity Church in October, 1841.

When the Dorchester street burying ground was converted into Dufferin square in 1871 Mr. Jones caused the remains of the Rev. Mr. Willoughby to be removed to Mount Royal Cemetery and re-interred in his own lot. The monument erected to his memory by the General Sir Richard D. Jackson, commander of the forces, who administered the government in 1841-42, died suddenly in Montreal in July, 1845, and his funeral service was conducted at Trinity Church, which was suitably draped for the occasion. His successor, Earl Cathcart, was also a pewholder of this church as well as other distinguished personages.

Other prominent citizens found among the pewholders of the early days included Judges Day, Dunkin and Gale, Sheriff Coffin, Dr. Holmes, etc.

In 1842 the Rev. D. B. Parnter and the Rev. Frederick Broome were appointed assistant ministers to Mr. Willoughby. The former was ordained as
