

CONTENTS.

v

CHAPTER XIII.

THE OCEAN AND ITS LIVING WONDERS (continued).

	PAGE
The Crustaceans, a Crusty Set—Young Crabs and their Peculiarities—Shells and no Shells—Powers of Renewal—The Biter Bit—Cocoa-nut-eating Crabs—Do Crabs like Boiling?—The Land Crab and his Migrations—Nigger Excitement—The King Crab—The Hut Crab—A True Yarn—The Hermit or Soldier Crab—Pugnaciousness—Crab War and Human War—Prolific Crustaceans—Hissing Lobster-pots—Technical Differences—How do Lobsters shed their Shells?—Fishermen's Ideas—Habits of the Lobster—Its Feecndity—The Supply for Billingsgate—The Season—"Lobster Frolics" in British North America—Eel-grass—Cray-fish, Prawns, and Shrimps	150

CHAPTER XIV.

OCEAN LIFE—THE HARVEST OF THE SEA.

Fishes and their Swimming Apparatus—The Bladder—Scientific Classification—Cartilaginous Fish—The Torpedo—A Living Galvanic Battery—The Shark—His Love for Man in a Gastronomic Sense—Stories of their Prowess—Catching a Shark—Their Interference with Whaling—The Tiger-Shark—African Worship of the Monster—The Dog-fish—The Sturgeon—Enormous Feecndity—Caviare—The Bony Fishes—The Flying Fish: its Feats; its Enemies—Youth of a Salmon—The Parr, the Smolt, and the Grilse—Flourishes in the Sea—The Ponds at stormfield—The Salmon's Enemies—The Ettrick Shepherd Canned Salmon, and where it comes from—The Fish a drug in N. W. America—Canoes impeded by them—The Fisheries of the Columbia River—The Fishing Season—Modes of Catching Salmon—The Factories and Processes employed	159
--	-----

CHAPTER XV.

OCEAN LIFE—THE HARVEST OF THE SEA (concluded).

The Clupeide—The Herring—Its Cabalistic Marks—A Warning to Royalty—The "Great Fishery"—Modes of Fishing—A Night with the Wlek Fishermen—Suicidal Fish—The Value of Deep-sea Fisheries—Report of the Commissioners—Feecndity of the Herring—No fear of Fish Famille—The Shad—The Sprat—The Cornish Pilchard Fisheries—The "Huer"—Raising the "Tack"—A Grand Harvest—Gigantic Holibut—Newfoundland—Cod Fisheries—Brutalities of Tunny Fishing—The Mackeral—Its Courage, and Love of Man—Garum sauce—The formidable Sword-fish—Fishing by Torchlight—Sword through a Ship's side—General Remarks on Fish—Fish Life—Conversation—Musical Fish—Pleasures and Excitements—Do Fish sleep?	168
--	-----

CHAPTER XVI.

MONSTERS OF THE DEEP.

Mark Twain on Whales—A New Version of an Old Story—Whale as Food—Whaling in 1670—The Great Mammal's Enemy the "Killer"—The Animal's Home—The so-called Fisheries—The Sperm Whale—Spermaceti—The Chase—The Capture—A Mythical Monster—The Great Sea Serpent—Yarns from Norway—An Archdeacon's Testimony—Stories from America—From Greenland—Mahone Bay—A Tropical Sea Serpent—What is the Animal?—Seen on a Voyage to India—Off the Coast of Africa—Other Accounts—Professor Owen on the Subject—Other Theories	179
--	-----

CHAPTER XVII.

BY THE SEA-SHORE.

English Appreciation of the Sea-side—Its Variety and Interest—Heavy Weather—The Green Waves—On the Cliffs—The Sea from there—Madame de Gasparin's Reveries—Description of a Tempest—The Voice of God—Calm—A Great Medusa off the Coast—Night on the Sea—Boating Excursion—In a Cavern—Colonies of Sea-anemones—Rock Pools—Souther's Description—Treasures for the Aquarium—A Hat Story—Rapid Influx of Tide and its Dangers—Melancholy Fate of a Family—Life under Water	190
--	-----

CHAPTER XVIII.

BY THE SEA-SHORE (continued).

A Submerged Forest—Grandeur of Devonshire Cliffs—Castellated Walls—A Natural Palace—Collection of Sea-weeds—The Tide a Miserable Mismomer—The Bladder Wrack—Practical Uses—The Harvest-time for Collectors—The Huge Laminaria—Good for Knife-handles—Marine Rope—The Red Seeded Group—Munchausen's Gin Tree Beaten—The Cornaline a Vegetable—Beautiful Varieties—Irish Moss—The Green Seeds—Hints on Preserving Sea-weeds—The Boring Pholias—How they Drill—Sometimes through each other—The Spinous Cockle—The "Red-noses"—Hundreds of Peasantry saved from Starvation—"Rubbish," and the difficulty of obtaining it—Results of a Basketful—The Contents of a Shrimper's Net—Miniature Fish of the Shore	199
---	-----

CHAPTER XIX.

SKETCHES OF OUR COASTS—CORNWALL.

The Land's End—Cornwall and her Contributions to the Navy—The Great Botallack Mine—Curious Sight Outwardly—Plunging Out the Atlantic Ocean—The Roar of the Sea Heard Inside—In a Storm—The Miner's Fears—The "Loogan Stone"—A Foolish Lieutenant and his Little Joke—The Penalty—The once-famed Wolf Rock—Revolving Lights—Are they Advantageous to the Mariner?—Smuggling in Cornwall—A Coastguardman Smuggler—Landing 150 Kegs under the Noses of the Officers—A Cornish Fishing-town—Looe, the Ancient—The Old Bridge—Beauty of the Place from a Distance—Closer Inspection—Picturesque Streets—The Inhabitants—Looe Island and the Ruts—A Novel Mode of Extermination—The Poor of Cornwall Better Off than Elsewhere—Mines and Fisheries—Working on "Tribute"—Profits of the Pilchard Season—Cornish Hospitality and Gratitude	207
--	-----