OPERATIC STARS AT MASSEY HALL

Quartet of Unusual Artists Given a Most Enthusiastic Reception.

Rarely do four operatic stars appear in conjunction on a concert plat-form as they did at M. sey Hall last night, and rarely is appreciation of an audience expressed in the enthusiastic terms in which it was meted out to the artists by the large meted out to the artists by the large numbe. in attendance. The program was mainly compose of arias and other operatic numbers requiring familiar and exacting work from the performers, and in every instance these were met with the finish that gave authority to every note in every production.

The National Anthem and "Rule Britannia" by Mme. Alda opened the program, her beautiful voice giving romise of exquisite things to fol-w. In the aria "In quello trine morbide" and the "Gavotte," both by Puccini, the prima donna revealed a voice of exceptional brilliancy, her high - having a bell-like quality rarely met with and a trill that has no rival unless it be that of Galli-Curci. Later, madame won fresh laurels in the duet "O quanti occhi from Madame Butterfly, sung with the glorious tenor Martinelli, and after the "Jewel Song." Faust, the applause of the "udience refused to subside until she had responded by two extra numbers, the "Swanee Ribber" put the "Congraph" ber" and the "Coo-coo." The appearance of Martinelli was simply a sweeping triumph from start to finish, the impelling beauty of his resonant voice, together with his happy manner, winning him round after round of applause after every number. His offerings were the arise number. His offerings were the aria "Celeste Aida," the aria "Che Geldda Manina." from "La Boheme," and the tenor in the closing quartet. After the aria from "La Boheme" the recalls were so insistent that two encores were given and still the audience called for more. Miss Lazzari had the aria "Amour Viens Aider," Saint C.ens, and "Shep-herd song from Dinorah," Meyerbeer. In both numbers the vocalist displayed an organ rich in the lowest notes and mellow to the point of velvet in the upper register. She gained her greatest success in the duet with Mr. De Luca, "Ah! I'alto ardor," from This was one of the "La Favorita." most finished offerings of the even-ing and involved both singers in a storm of applause. The fourth artist, Mr. De Luca, had the aria "Eri tu," from the "Masked L.II," and the linguistic feat "Largo al factotum" from "The Barber of Seville." in both of which he was heard to advantage. The closing number, the famous quartet from Verdi's "Rigoletto," approached the marvelous in brilliancy the company, including the noted accompanist, Gennaro Papl, were recalled three times before the audience, even at the close of a long program, satisfied, Miss Erin Ballard was the satisfying accompanist for

STAR AND GARTER SHOW OPENS WEEK AT GAYETY

Under the direction of I. M. Weingarden, and with an all-star cast, the "Star and Ga. er" show opened at the Gayety Theatre for the week's engagement yesterday afternoon with a capacity house. Everything in con-nection with the show is new and upto-the-minute. The cast is strong and exceptionally well balanced. The comedy parts are in the hands of those two old burlesque favorites, Bert Rose and James Coughlin. It is enough to say that they are up to their usual form.

Al. Lawrence is a juvenile who sings well and looks as the has a great future before him. He has a pleasing voice and with a little more action to his songs he will be sure to get there. La Brack and Weiss, those two dancing marvels, are back again with the show with some new dances of the highest order. Their work is uniform and smooth. Their work is uniform and smooth. The two skits, "For Art's Sake" and "Hingle-Dingle," which were specially written around the cast, are two of the best seen here this season. The chorus is far above the average and works hard from the first to the last curtain. The show is well worth while and is sure to please the many Gayety patrons.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN IN A "DOG'S LIFE"

Charlie Chaplin will be seen at the Charlie Chaplin will be seen at the Strand Theatre all this week in his latest production, "A Dog's Life." This is a $1,000,000 production and never before has Chaplin proved as Junny. In this production Charlie has a partner called "Scraps," a dog. Scraps is a cur, but is well trained and takes his part well. One of the funniest scenes of the picture is in a "tenderloin." where Chaplain meets a girl who was employed there. They become great friends, and when Charlie strikes a streak of luck they marry and buy a farm with money Scraps dug up in a backyard. The money was stolen from a drunk and buried there.

Chaplin has produced many a screaming comedy, but this is the funniest yet.

Mr. Robins himself took the part of the wanderer, reporter, chauffeur, sailor, soldier, backwoodsman, ranchman, jack-of-all-trades, with Othello's tongue and Romeo's heart. John Laurence Sullivan took the part of the father in his usual polished and distinctive style; Miss Bertha J. Blake appeared as Janet, Mr. Raymond's sister; and Alfred Woodhouse as John, his son.
