the merits of the Earl of Minto.

Lord Minto was not a bit too big for the governor-generalship of Canada, an office of purely nominal functions that any intelligent school-boy could fill. He is assuredly not big enough for the viceroyship of India as it has hitherto been regarded in Canada and Great Britain. Canada graduated two guccessful viceroys of India, Dufferin and Lansdowne; in Lord Aberdeen we graduated the making of a good third. Political or social preferment, or both, seem to have sidetracked Lord Aberdeen in favor of Lord Minto, and it will be fortunate if British prestige in Indoor and India does not pay the penalty.
