say, that all is right in Canada, and that our banks have saved the situation. Our banks cannot get back the New York, they have not the money to move the crops, they have to carry other stocks that they made loans on cannot close out to advantage. ome of them have been impolitic in th . flotation (with Canadian funds) of Mexican, South American and other electric and traction propositions.

For these and other reasons some change of policy is necessary. Will they tell us what it is to be? Are they willing to co-operate with parliament in carrying thru needed changes in our banking law and banking practice? Can they afford to be parties hereafter to the flotation of traction and electric securities (especially those outside of Canada, where capital is always scarce) that have all the water marks of Harriman and Ryan? If our bankers and bank shareholders read the significant article that we print to-day dealing with the financist situation in the United States which concludes with certain temperate and sane suggestions for adoption in that country, so as to restore confidence, if, we say, they read that erticle, they, too, may be led to do something in the same direction here.

And something similar has to be done here. We have heard two very solid Canadian bankers sav-two who happen to find their institutions in a very strong position to-day when trouble threatens—that if Harriman and Ryan must be put down and out. and their methods no longer countenanced by the banks of the United States, the same thing is just as much in order here; that there are some little Harrimans and Ryans hereabout and that Canada would breathe a good deal freer, and public confidence would be greatly strengthened if they were dropped for good, not carried over until they can renew their disasterbringing operations. Our banks are being over-adulated by newspapers when they ought to be doing housecleaning and reforming methods, both on their own account and on account of their high-finance customers. The situation in Toronto is at the door of the banks more than in any place else. And we are glad to know that at least some of the strongest of them are ressing on their brothers a little

A PSYCHIATRIC HOSPITAL. Psychiatry—the treatment of mental disease—is a branch of he science of healing that more, perhaps, than any is responding to the trend of modern hought. Altho the methods hitherto followed are vastly superior to those which obtained down to a comparatively recent period, it is only of lett years that the urgent need for systematic investigation into the causes of mental alienation, and for the scientific training of the student, has begun to receive the attention its public importance demands. To-day Germany leads the world in its care for the insane, a position all the more creditable since not long ago the treatment of these unfortunates was a reproach to the intelligence of that country. Once awakened to the advantages of early and intelligent treatment of mental maladies, German allenists advanced by leaps and bounds, and their lead must be follow-
