shout jurymen absenting themselves from the court without permission. Counsel, he said, were largely to blame for this lamentable condition of affairs. They set a very bad example by being late and keeping the judge waiting as had happened several times during the case just concluded. One of the counsel, and the offenders were not always the younger men, delayed the court for some three-quarters of an hour on the day of a recent funeral, when the court had been adjourned until a reasonably late hour in the afternoon purposely to accommodate counsel who wished to attend.
