WHY WAIT?

IT HARDLY SEEMS POSSIBLE, but nevertheless is true, that summer is gone, and in a very few weeks you will start furnace or heating stove again.

Coal may be likened to a see-saw, it usually goes up as the temperature goes down, so why wait? You cannot buy cheaper than now, and you are almost sure to save money by buying today.

To have coal in the bin, good coal, just the minute it is needed, is certainly comforting.

We handle only the highest grades of Hard and Soft Coal—all slack and dust removed before delivery. Let us—

OTTAWA GUARD HELD UP BORDEN

Ottawa, Sept. 10.—Sir Robert Borden, the premier, was held up tonight by a dominion policeman while leaving his office in the east block and had to be escorted by a detachment of the mounted police to his home.

An Old Soldier.

Frederick Edwards, who had fought under the late Lord Roberts in Afghanistan, and under General White, the hero of Ladysmith, who in Burma, gave the views of his own son at the front, and said he had duly received every one of the many articles that had been sent him from St. John. "And I can't understand why other people should not have their sons receive their presents, too. There is too much croaking. Don't keep your boys out here at home hanging around. Send them over there to help others quite as brave to fight for you side by side with the others." As proving that the soldiers were not ill fed and hardly used as so many of the unaccountable rumors in St. John have said, he declared that his son had gained 20 pounds in weight since he enlisted with the first contingent when he was only 17 years of age. Mr. Edwards' remarks, while not a speech in the ordinary sense, were a telling factor at the night's meeting, for they had a directness of appeal that more than made up for the lack of words.

Rev. J. J. McCaskill.

Rev. J. J. McCaskill spoke with enthusiasm of the part Great Britain had taken in the war for right. His sketch of how the war was taking place on the hills of Nazareth, was highly interesting. He went on:

"There are those who tell us it is not Canada's fight, and indeed our ineffectual participation in it shows that idea must be back of the minds of many. Charles Masterman reports a high English military authority who describes this war as a war of preparation; a year of conflict and a year of victory. The year of preparation is past and the year of conflict is well upon us. Had we girded our loins for the fight, armed ourselves with less widespread patriotism and more of Ross rifles, prepared ourselves with the same dogged determination as Britain, we would have had over six men enrolled for every one who is now in barracks or in trenches. The ranks are rallied tonight. The empire is depending upon the voluntary system. It does not take men from their activities in time of peace and train them for the art of war, because it has faith in the young men and because it

GOOD RESULTS FOR FIRST WEEK

Sixty Two Recruits Have Answered the Call SEVENTEEN YESTERDAY

Plain Speaking at Public Meeting Last Evening—The Issues Well Defined

A total of sixty-two men signed, and in uniform, is the record of St. John for the last week in recruiting activities. Seventeen men were added yesterday. Frederick McDonough, Frank Leo Smith, Frank William Walsh, Douglas Hann, Charles Parker, James Brundell, Halloway, Percy Lindsay Wheaton, and John Francis Kennedy of St. John; Arnold Joseph Smith, Monmouth; Ernest Alfred Harty, Moss Glen, N. B.; Robert McKay, Scotland; and George W. Lavine, Clitheroe, N. B., and four who did not wish their names published for the present.

During the day a meeting was held at Miller's mill, when in some respects this justified the innovation, as the men listening to the recruiting appeal with attention though there were no direct results in recruits. These mill indoor meetings are to be continued. Another mass meeting is to be held in King square this evening, when there will be a good list of speakers. They will include Sergt. Fred Hyatt, formerly secretary of the St. John Trades and Labor Council, a man who "has a way with him." Lieut. A. J. Brooks, who may be relied upon to talk convincingly. Sergt. Knight, and one other who has been described as "a dark horse" to all except the committee. An after-meeting for men will be held at the Imperial Theatre, when Sergt. Knight will give a special message.

Last night the City Comet Band played selections to a large gathering in which the proportion of men to women was about equal. The speakers were Lieut. J. L. Rolston, Halifax; Rev. J. J. McCaskill, who was announced as ready to enlist when the time came; Frederick Edwards, St. John, an ex-imperial service man, who has a son only 15, now at the front, and Sergeant Knight, the wounded but highly energetic Highlander.

Germany's Crime.

Lieut. Rolston reviewed the story of Germany's violation of Belgian neutrality to show that Germany had planned the whole campaign through that land and to show how England was obliged by honor to take up her part. The king of the Belgians only held on for a few miles of his own kingdom with which he had defended Canada in some part.

"Why should we Canadians not take part in the fight of the Empire side by side with the Australians, the South Africans, the other sons of the mother country coming to her aid? Were not Canadians interested in a war which was for humanity? If we have a fight we do not want others to fight it for us. That is a principle that every man who has blood in his veins would want to see carried out. It is vital to Canada that we take part in the war in Europe. Let us realize that Canada is at war; it is not other people only but Canada, and the sooner we realize it the sooner the war will end."

He believed that the people would some time soon or late come to the conclusion that there was no money they could spend, no sacrifice they could make that would be too much for the accomplishment of the great end. Lieutenant Rolston made a fine comparison of the war as a fire which was burning down property at a distance but which was steadily spreading towards Canada day by day, and the man who refused to go out to fight it on the plains of Flanders would later on have to fight it at home.

"It is not to be believed that the people of Canada have become so weak in their dependence on England's defense and by the enjoyment of prosperity but that they can rise to this occasion to make the sacrifice for the empire, for justice and for freedom which, if they live anywhere, live under the Union Jack." (Applause.)

An Old Soldier.

Frederick Edwards, who had fought under the late Lord Roberts in Afghanistan, and under General White, the hero of Ladysmith, who in Burma, gave the views of his own son at the front, and said he had duly received every one of the many articles that had been sent him from St. John. "And I can't understand why other people should not have their sons receive their presents, too. There is too much croaking. Don't keep your boys out here at home hanging around. Send them over there to help others quite as brave to fight for you side by side with the others." As proving that the soldiers were not ill fed and hardly used as so many of the unaccountable rumors in St. John have said, he declared that his son had gained 20 pounds in weight since he enlisted with the first contingent when he was only 17 years of age. Mr. Edwards' remarks, while not a speech in the ordinary sense, were a telling factor at the night's meeting, for they had a directness of appeal that more than made up for the lack of words.

Rev. J. J. McCaskill.

Rev. J. J. McCaskill spoke with enthusiasm of the part Great Britain had taken in the war for right. His sketch of how the war was taking place on the hills of Nazareth, was highly interesting. He went on:

"There are those who tell us it is not Canada's fight, and indeed our ineffectual participation in it shows that idea must be back of the minds of many. Charles Masterman reports a high English military authority who describes this war as a war of preparation; a year of conflict and a year of victory. The year of preparation is past and the year of conflict is well upon us. Had we girded our loins for the fight, armed ourselves with less widespread patriotism and more of Ross rifles, prepared ourselves with the same dogged determination as Britain, we would have had over six men enrolled for every one who is now in barracks or in trenches. The ranks are rallied tonight. The empire is depending upon the voluntary system. It does not take men from their activities in time of peace and train them for the art of war, because it has faith in the young men and because it believes that when the hour of danger threatens, when the power of tyranny threatens to tear down the flag of freedom, the best it breeds, the flower of its manhood will hasten, from desk and counter, lecture room and plough, fisher boat and factory bench to plant it firmly on high against the onslaughts of the most relentless foe." (Applause.)

A Direct Appeal.

Sergt. Knight also spoke. His words seem to get added interest as the week goes on. His style is now pretty well known. A cold report does not adequately represent his glowing fervor nor sometimes his homely phrase. He said that there was altogether too much criticism and too much scoffing at recruiting efforts in St. John. He himself had been pointed out in the street as "the recruiting guy," but he heard one young man say, "He can't get me with his talk." Sergt. Knight added picturesquely that he wished he could see conscription coming so that some of the men would be made to do a part of what they shirked now. He added with a good deal of point that the men who came back at the close of the war would have more weight in the policy of the country than any who stayed at home. Most of the recruits they had left jobs. And some of you are mean enough to be hanging on waiting for their jobs. But if you hold a job that is left when I come back," he went on with the directness of John Bunyan, "God hold you for you will not hold it long." (Loud applause.)

Sergt. Knight is a Scot by birth and on Thursday evening the band of pipers gave him the good old Scottish honor of playing him from the rink to his lodging, with the finest strain they could put into the pipes. It was a well conceived compliment.

CANADIAN FRUITS

Fine Display

Nothing is more appetizing and attractive than a store-window display of our Canadian Fall Fruits. Many merchants realize this and in their own interests take full advantage of the opportunity to make their stores attractive. There is abundant health as well as luxury in fall fruits and anything that can be done to increase the consumption of nature's delicious specialties is a worthy contribution to the work of National Benefaction.

One might think the Canadians should not need any introduction to their own fruits, but it is a fact that foreign fruits have a large sale in this country and it must be accounted for only by presuming that people do not appreciate the superiority of the home-grown product. The Dominion Government is making commendable efforts to educate our people along these lines by means of Display Advertising. The farther North a fruit can be grown successfully, the better the flavor and quality. This is exemplified in the superiority of Canadian peaches, plums and apples over the ones imported from the South.

The thrifty housewife will can and preserve more fruit this year than ever before as an economy, the if wise—will adopt.

MRS. BROWN'S APPEAL TO FREDERICTON WOMEN

Fredericton, N. B., Sept. 10.—Mrs. Netta B. Brown, of Montreal, spoke to a monster meeting of ladies at the Opera House tonight and aroused them to great enthusiasm. Although the meeting was announced for 8.30, the hall was packed to the doors three-quarters of an hour earlier, and hundreds were turned away, not being able to get even standing room.

she made her appearance wearing the khaki uniform of the Women's Volunteer Reserve, which she recently organized in Montreal.

At the close of her address Mrs. Brown asked those who were willing to do their share to rise and repeat a solemn pledge as follows:

"I solemnly pledge myself that from this time until England and her Allies are victorious in this war to use all my influence for recruiting, and I will not seek in any way whatever to hold back any man from giving himself to his country in this time of need."

Practically the entire audience rose. There was great enthusiasm. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mrs. Brown. God Save the King was sung and Fredericton's greatest public meeting came to a close.
