A laugh that was like a groan escaped from one prisoner's lips. "Look you!" he said, forcely battling down his agitation; "If you destroy my c nusciousness of right, I shall go mad be-tore your eyes. Come closer to me; I do not know what I am about to say, but there are listeners outside that door, and I do to: c choose that they shall hear me Oh, do not fear! I can not harm you. See; t ley have chained me to the leg of the table, and I can not move six inches from the scat. It was done an hour before you came, for your protection, as I now can understand. At other times my limited Yo I can approach me with safety." Sassafras went to the door of the cell, and threw it open. "My interview is not yet at an end," he said to the attendants. "Where is the jailer? Remove that man's chains. Unclasp his hands." They hesitated to obey him; but he would not be denied. The prisoner's limbs were set free; the door of the cell was closed again, and only they two were within the four walls. Beavers and Pilot Cloths! OF With Plain and Figured Fronts.
