A CONTRAST

The Courier has become the organ of the little Brantfordites. Expositor.

Don't want to usurp your place thank you. For years the Expositor has supported measures which would have involved the belittlement of Brantford.

Here is a partial list. 1. Tried to have Brantford Water-works handed over to a U. S. company for their enrichment at the expense of the people. It was only when it found The Courier to be on the popular side in demanding public ownership that it switched.

2. Fought continuously against competition in electric lighting.

3. Didn't at first prove very enthusiastic on behalf of telephone competition.

4. Fought to have the city give a free site on the Market Square for a Post Office.

5. Fought tooth and nail on three occasions against Hydro Electric in order that a private company might continue monopolistic prices.

These are a few local illustrations. Now as to Dominion affairs.

1. The Brantford Expositor opposed the National Policy, that scheme which led to the first building of the Dominion.

2. It opposed the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, that project which started the present glorious development of the West.

3. It supported Commercial Union that Wilmot plot which was designed to have the stars and stripes float over the Dominion.

4. It espoused the Reciprocity pact which President Taft, in a letter to Ex-President Roosevelt, stated was designed to make Canada "an appendage" of our neighbors.

But why go on with either list? The undoubted and the unchallengeable fact is that our esteemed cotem has by its advocacies, constantly declared not only for a smaller Brantford, but also for a smaller Dominion.

GOVERNMENT TO ESTABLISH PUBLIC HEALTH DEPARTMENT

The Government will introduce this session a bill to create a department of public health. Hon. Dr. Bule, Minister of Interior, has for years been interested in national problems of health, and the work of preparing a bill has been placed in the hands and the hands of Hon. Mr. Burrell, Minister of Agriculture.

under whose department the present branch of public health lies. At present the several departments are undertaking different branches of public health work, and the work is naturally done in a more or less haphazard manner. For instance quarantine is looked after by the Minister of Agriculture, the inspection of immigrants is handled by the Minister of Interior and the pure foods act is administered by the Minister of Inland Revenue.

While the scope of the bill has not yet been definitely settled, some of the fields of work which it is proposed to allot to the new department, and which Dr. Roche is considering, are the following: Sanitary advice to municipalities, quarantine, the health of employes of public works, the collecting of vital statistics, the adulteration of food, the sanitary and medical side of Indian affairs, the medical inspection of immigrants, the operation of sick seamen's and marine hospitals and the supervision of a National Bacteriological Laboratory at Ottawa.

HEREDITY.

Eugenics and eugenics. What do these names stand for? What meaning do they convey? The majority of the reading public are wondering whether they may be new names for auction bridge, or new names coined for some Suffragette movement. They are neither of these. These subjects have been freely discussed last summer in England before the British association, and very recently before the A.A.A.S. in America. They simply mean this: Eugenics is a science, founded by Galton, and defined by him as "The science which deals with all influences that improve and develop the inborn qualities of a race," or, in other words, it deals with race improvement through heredity and selective marriages for the improvement of the future race. Eugenics, on the other hand, deals with race improvement through environment.

So there comes the battle between heredity and environment influences. We can dismiss eugenics in a few words. No one can possibly doubt for a moment that good surroundings—both moral and physical—influence a human being for the better. This may not be science but it is common-sense.

Now for the science of eugenics. To change defects of a mental or physical make-up, in any being, to heredity, removes that being at once from any possible control, it helps to make men irresponsible, and excuses them from making the best of their endowments. By this heredity theory everything is predetermined. This debarring philosophy, in which there is no possibility of change or control in the individual, in which there will be an overgrowth of intellect and an atrophy of will, is a symptom of senility, whether in men or nations. Therefore, it is necessary to return to the joys of childhood age, in which men believed themselves free to do, to think, to strive, and the world consisted of nothing but Galahads.

Chance, environment, heredity, all combined have settled many things for us, and we are hedged about by bounds we cannot pass; but these bounds and limitations are not so confining as we sometimes believe, and within them we have considerable freedom and a deal of responsibility.

It is amazing that men who hold to hereditary ideas, in some portion of their brain, in their daily lives contradict this almost paralyzing philosophy, their acts proclaim their belief in their power of self-control—they set themselves hard tasks, they overcome great difficulties.

Eugenics are all very well but is the movement practical? Hardly. From the beginning of the world men and women have cast in their lot together and it may be safely affirmed that they will continue to do so until the end of the chapter.

Whenever Dan Cupid steps in it is a safe wager that he will always upset the eugenical apple cart, and if legal contracts are not made there are liable to be a lot more of the other kind.

In the opinion of this paper, and it is only a lay opinion, the proper method is not only to bring up the young people under right surroundings but also to more freely teach them the sacred truths now far too generally left to chance—often vicious chance. That sort of thing would in time lead to a general uplifting of the human race, both physically and morally.
