

theologian and in the realm of theology he is likely to do his hardest thinking. Nothing is more congenial to his tastes than either to discuss or to hear exposition on the the great truths of the Word. Archy is whole-souled, beloved and esteemed by all.

THE subject of this sketch is a member of that widely known family, the Browns. Mr. Lew. Brown, though yet in his teens, has given evidence of being the possessor of no mean abilities. He has spent three delightful years in Woodstock—and vicinity. His record as a student has been eminently satisfactory. He is a good worker, and has generally kept himself on the right side of College regulations. Notwithstanding a rumored attachment to the medical profession, it is generally understood that Lew's objective point is Telugu land with his missionary brother. The faculty and students of W.C., as well as a select circle of outside friends, will much regret Lew's departure from our midst.

EDWARD P. COLLINS is a native of Princeton, County of Oxford. Ed. first made the acquaintance of Woodstock College in the year of 1887-1888, and since that time he has been in almost continuous attendance. The chapter of events belonging to that period is very familiar to the subject of this sketch ; if not a participant in the occurrences of the time, he knows every one else who was. His good nature and love of fun make him a favorite with all. Unobtrusive and modest he is, yet the boys know too well that in some things they are out of the race when Ed. Collins is around. It is a matter of daily remark and satisfaction how solicitously the charge of his little brother Phil, a young and promising first-year lad, devolves upon big brother Ed.

CLARENCE B. MOLLINS is a dweller in the neighborhood of Burgessville. Clarence has kept on quietly but steadily for the full course, and now he has his reward in a successful graduation. We hope he may send another from Burgessville to take the vacant place that he now leaves. C. B. will probably pursue further studies in Toronto, and we believe he has laid foundations during the last two and-a half years that will carry a fair superstructure.

JOHN F. VICHERT is another Gobles' boy. He is yet in his teens, as the youthful face would easily show ; but his is an old and wise head on young shoulders. It does us all good to hear John's sage reasonings on the outlook for the future. The University will next year ring with John's flowing eloquence ; but no one doubts that the "boy preacher" will carry his honors with becoming grace and modesty.

PETER MODE hails from Vankleek Hill. Peter has been in attendance for one year, and in that time has won upon the regards of all. He has youth, ability, manliness on his side. His influence will ever be on the side of right, and none will ever regret having known P. Mode. Woodstock College will be the poorer because of his leaving, and McMaster University the richer for his presence.

JOHN McCaw's home is in the sturdy east. Some years ago he migrated westward to the neighborhood of Chatham, and here he came
