

---

mine—shall at any future time undertake to unfold his frailties in more detail, then British loyalists will not forget that he believed in guarding for ever the imperial birthright whose grandeur he was great enough to understand. And all they who stand by the mother of nations will feel that his sins—which were not many—should be forgiven him, for that he hath loved her much.