Library more than books

Libraries are for book right? Wrong!

At least that statement isn't entirely true. Libraries are filled with thousands of innumerable books on subjects, but today's library is no longer the dusty, dimly lit, domain of the bookophila. The Mississauga Library has many programmes for folks whose interests range from egg painting to music appreciation, from political fooferah-ing to bread baking. All of which are presented in BDARY

DAVID BOWIE ... IN THE FLESH ... JUNE A - AT O'NEESE CENTRE When you really enjoy an artist's work, and you get to see him in concert, there is nothing worse than that artist falling short of your wildest expectations. I am not a big Bowie fan, but I'd say just about everyone else who was there was. They ate, it up, and I with plenty of reservations, certainly have to hand it to the man, he really puts on a show!! Let's break the various elements of the concert down. The music, to my mind, is the most important thing. Well, Bowie writes rock and roll — call it futuristic, decadent, avant garde — but it all comes out rock and roll.

There's a lot of Bowie's music that is simply derivitive of the Stones and most other forms of rock music. His musicalness is limited and the show he surrounds himself with, covers up a good part of that. His band plays superbly, they are a tight band, with special mention going to the pianist and sax player they were truly outstanding

His lyrics are excellent and since they are half the music, make up a lot for the lack of originality in the actual music. The show was perfectly executed. The set, complete with ydrolic lift for the Space Oddity number, was inventive, functional and very necessary to the context of the performance. The props, be they a simple rope used for Diamond Dogs and Panic In Detroit or Bowie's two male background singers dancers, cohorts, make every move and gesture crowd crass Each song was acted out giving a accurate visual glimpse of the songs meaning. Bowie himself, is a performer in the true tradition of show jusiness. He uses all the facilities he can c muster, be it mime, dance, acting or singing and he gets full marks on all counts. He did not appear in any bizarre costumes, but opted for a modern zoot-suit and sweater The audience was the most unsavory part of the evenings entertainment. A crass bunch they were. God, in jeans and a sport shirt, I felt underdressed. Male and female people were practically interchangeable and when this man had worked for almost two hours without a break, these thankless crazies, had the nerve to "yell "Rip off" because he didn't give an encore. I tell you Moses could part the Red Sea for these people, and if he didn't do his burning bush scene, they'd feel cheated.

Bowie great,

When, will a audience accept what they are given in good faith, and let it be? If he'd done a half hour it would be different, but believe me, he earned every cent he made.

All in all it was a good concert. The theatrics were interesting, but it didn't hold the fascination for me that most there seemed to have. The man is bringing a different type of presentation to the rock culture and it's like the first time you saw a color television, it's great but you can get used to it. I don't mean to sound mundane, but as good as it was, it still doesn't compare to my ears, the satisfaction I derived from hearing Joni Mitchell and Bob Dylan and The Band, but then that's where I'm at and that's what makes horse racing.
