Your money back if Purity Flour does not prove entirely satisfactory in the baking.

DON'T simply buy flour from the dollar and cent side of it. Buy high-quality flour. That means PURITY FLOUR. The first flour extra cost is more than made up by the extra number of loaves of bread it makes by the superiority of the bread and pastry in sweetness of flavor and softness of texture. Purity Flour is the only flour that is made from the finest wheat of the world.

Purity contains the greater nutrient and the vim of a strong hard wheat flour. Food made from Purity Flour gives the consumer health, strength and force, which cannot be gained from the use of the weaker soft wheat flour.

"MORE BREAD AND BETTER BREAD"

PURITY FLOUR

You can buy as little as a 7 pound cotton bag or in 14, 24, 40, and 60 pound sacks. Also in barrels and half-barrels.

Purity may cost a little more than some flours but you'll find it's more than worth the difference. To be genuine, must bear the Purity trade mark.

The Gardener.
My garden stretches to the sun,
But O, how faint and pale to see,
I love to think, when winter's done,
How gay my plot will be.
For though I cannot see them thrive,
The garden keeps my flowers alive.
In spring, when lily buds are white,
With little bells that ring and sing,
And all green things that bore the light
Are just awakening,
I half forget how still and deep
The gardener puts them all to sleep.
And when the summer time is come,
And I can hear all day long,
The leaves, that to-day are dumb,
Bear my happy song,
About my very feet and air,
To where the white snow angels are.
When I kneel down to make my prayer
Before I go to bed at night,
I think of you, O garden fair,
Of the life that's in you,
Though I now sleep and till the soil,
The real, true Gardener, God.

The Playactress.
BY S. R. CROCKETT.
"I trust," said the Great Preacher, looking as straightly and simply into the eyes of the young girl as though she had been his equal in years and standing—"I trust that both before and after preaching the word, I can do justly and love mercy. No man has accused me of being lacking in either—a swift thought struck him—'though often they might have done so,' he added, with characteristic self-reproach.
"Then," said the young woman, with the same strange directness, to-day you have spoken and prayed about the prodigal. Here is the prodigal's child for you to cherish—the daughter of William Rutherford, your son, who died on the island of Jamaica. Before tonight you can prove your preaching."
The Great Preacher was also a great man, which is not so common. His eyelid did not quiver, though his heart beat to hear from the lips of this stranger girl that, though there was no new mound beside those other down on the green strath by the Wariston Water, the last of his blood and name had passed away from the earth.
"Yet even in that moment he took the stroke obediently from the Lord's hand as he had taken all the rest. But this time it was harder, for he was not to receive the last message and to close the eye of his youngest and dearest son.
"You say my son is dead," he said at last very quietly.
"Your son is dead," replied the girl.
"Bring you any message from him to me?" asked Gilbert Rutherford.
The girl handed him a letter.
It was brief, written on thin paper blurred and wrinkled, and in characters which slanted irregularly across the page, heedless of the faint blue rulings.
"Father," the letter began, "I mind me now in a far country of the prodigal you speak of, but you once had the better of me. He arose and went to his father. I would arise to come to you, but can not. I lie on my dying bed on the seaboard of this Isle of Jamaica and drink the bitter cup I brewed. You would receive your boy Willie. I well know. Given now you would forgive me, could I come, I should have no fear of that. I wish I were just as sure of God. But I'll c'en have to risk it. There's a hair of mine in London. I beseech you, if an opportunity comes, take the child into your home—but never the mother, even if she be still alive and should ask to be received. Somehow, I want to think that my little lass, that I shall see no more in this world, may hear the noise of the Wariston Water as it runs past the garden end down to the Grey Town, as I heard it when I was still your child, and innocent. Father take the hairs if she comes to you, for the sake of the boy that played horses with you in the old orchard apple trees. Oh, let her not out of that bonny garden into the cruel world. Father pray for me, even though I be dead before this comes to you."
"You will allow me to help—"
"No," said the girl, "that I cannot. I have brought you all that can have any claim upon you. —Ailie!" she called to the child, suddenly.
The little girl came running to her. "Look, Aunt Bessie, what pretty dainties I have found for you. Take them all from Ailie!" she cried.
The heart of Gilbert Rutherford gave a great throb. That was his wife's name, the name of the Ailie that had been his bride and Willie's mother.
"How can you give her up?" he said, wondering, looking from the one to the other.
The actress of stage plays turned on the minister for the first time with a sudden anger.
"Oh, what right have you, who are getting all, to make it harder for me than it is!" she cried, clasping and unclasping her white nervous finge.
"You will come to see her?" said Gilbert Rutherford.
"It were better not," she said, yielding.
"He knew that also to be true, but in spite of the thought he said again—'But you will come?'
"It will come!" she said.

CHAPTER III.
CLEARING AFTER-THOUGHT.
BESSIE UPTON, the playactress, walked very steadily down the narrow gravel path from the western door of the Kirk of the Hill. The light of her life had suddenly, as it were, gone out. No more would Aunt Bessie feel the pressure of the little hand that had given her a new hold on life. It was ended, and there was a singing in her ears. It was right. She had no regrets. He was a good man; but spite of all, the light would persist in brightening and darkening without reason, the trees most strangely take to running round. There was a warm sun shining on her hand. Yet the sun shone and the sky was blue. From the other doorway, by the session house, Stephen Armstrong, the young minister of the Kirk of the Hill, watched her. He knew her for a stranger. No one in Cairn Edward looked like that. Yet there was something about her carriage. The girl did not look strong. Evidently she had stopped behind to speak to Dr. Gilbert Rutherford, and now she was going away. But stay, there was a little girl with the Doctor—whom he had never seen before. They were walking towards him.
"This is what Stephen Armstrong thought as he stood and talked to the most troublesome office-bearer. Then for the first time the Great Preacher put his hand into the hand of his child's child, for the grandfather is the parent once removed, and the removal has done him good. But none of these things came into the mind of Dr. Gilbert as he looked at the confiding little hand in his, and went down to meet young Stephen Armstrong. He had, on the other hand, a double sense of responsibility—even of fear. He was a man of sixty. How should he bring up a child of five years with a floss of sunny curls for ever getting into her eyes? "There were heart-breaks before both of them, he foresaw, and her strange upbringing would no doubt make the matter worse.
"This is my granddaughter," he said, calmly, to Stephen Armstrong, as he met him half-way down the walk.
"That talk, dark, clean shaven young man looked suddenly aghast.
"But the Great Preacher went on, as though he were giving out the whole community. The great spiritual need of communities just now is higher personal and social ideals. A part of church work is educative, and it should culminate in giving to all the young people a love for the country and an intellectual appreciation of it.
"Professor Bailey, chairman of the Roosevelt commission on country life, tells us that the religion of the open country must run into the indigenous affairs of everyday life; adding that 'a course in a good agricultural college would wisely supplement training in a theological seminary.' The church must get a firmer grip upon human life as it is here and now. Why should it not shift its work to modern times and customs, making the basis of religion the simple performance of the Golden Rule?"
"Has she? Do you know their names?" asked Stephen, more eagerly than there was warrant for.
"I do not," returned Dr. Rutherford, with some brevity; "her own name is Miss Upton."
"No, no, her name is Aunt Bessie," broke in the little girl, quickly, speaking for the first time, "and she is a darling. But when she plays her name is Miss Grace St. Vincent."
Stephen Armstrong looked in amazement from one to the other, and his mouth took the shape of a round O, so full of surprise was he.
"But the embarrassment of the moment was relieved by William Greg of the Nether Larg. For him the morning's duty was not done till he came to put his warm friendly hand into that of the minister for the day, and to give him thanks for every good word spoken. He was of the

Is Your Back the Weakest Point?
Does it play out first when you have steady work to do.
Under these circumstances you can be pretty sure that the kidneys are weak and disordered and that the back pain is really kidney pain.
These symptoms are deposits in the urine after standing, pain and smarting when passing water, frequent desire to urinate, also headaches, dizziness and heaviness of the skin and pains in the limbs and body.
Backache soon disappears when Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are used and kidney disease is thoroughly cured by this treatment.
Mr. Geo. Tyson, Westport, Leeds Co., Ont., writes: "For five years I was completely laid up with lame back and could neither walk or ride. I tried many medicines but the doctor's treatment did not help me.
"A friend told me about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and this medicine completely cured me. I have never had a lame back or kidney trouble since and my cure has been the means of selling many boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."
One pill a dose, 25 cents a box at all dealers or send to Dr. Chase & Co., Toronto.

Strain to Keep up Appearances.
There are plenty of people in all of our large cities who do not allow themselves enough to eat, and practise all sorts of pinching economy at home for the sake of keeping up appearances in society.
What terrible inconvenience, hardship and suffering we endure on account of other people's eyes and opinions! What slaves, what fools we make of ourselves because of what other people think. How we scheme and contrive to make them think we are other than we really are.
It is other people's eyes that are expensive. It is other people's eyes that make us unhappy and discontented with our lot, that make us strain and struggle and slave in order to keep up false appearances.
The suit, the hat must be discarded, not because they are badly worn, but because others will think it strange that we do not change them.
The effect of all this false living, this constant practice of deception in appearance, in our manner of living, our dress is undermining the American character, ruining our genius, making us superficial, unreal, false.
No man can really respect himself when he is conscious that he is acting false colors.
If you are wearing clothes and living in luxury which you cannot afford, these things label you all over with falsehood and are perpetual witnesses against you. There is only one possible result upon the character of falsehood, whether acted or spoken, and that is perpetual deterioration. It does not matter whether you wear lies, tell lies, or act lies, the effect upon your character is the same.

TONIC TREATMENT FOR INDIGESTION
Remedies that Digest the Food Will Not Cure the Trouble—The Stomach Must be Fitted to Do Nature's Work.
The tonic treatment for indigestion, dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach and gastritis is having remarkable success in curing obstinate cases and deserves attention from every sufferer. Its principal is that remedies for indigestion that digest the food for the stomach give relief for only a short time. Ultimately they unfit the stomach to do its own proper work, because they make its already weak powers still weaker by disease, while the remedy that strengthens the stomach makes it capable of digesting the food for itself, and this benefit is lasting. A remedy that is not only a tonic for the stomach, but for the blood and serves as well, invigorates the entire system and makes recovery from the painful, weakening effects of indigestion rapid and thorough. Every sufferer from indigestion will find in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills just what he needs, as they enrich the blood, tone the stomach and thus enable it to do the work nature intended it should do. This has been proved in thousands of cases, and it is worth the while to every sufferer from stomach trouble to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. Mr. Edward Carterton, Campbellton, N. B., says:—"I have been a great sufferer from indigestion and stomach trouble and although I had treatment from several doctors, I did not find a cure until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I can hardly describe how much I suffered at times. Every meal brought with it more or less agony, and I seemed to have a complete distaste for food. I had almost begun to think my case incurable when I came across a pamphlet advertising Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to give them a trial. I am very thankful that I did so, for I had not been taking the pills long before I found them helping me, and in six weeks every symptom of the trouble had vanished. I can now eat heartily almost any kind of food, and no longer experience pain and discomfort after eating."

DINNER BELL MUSIC.
The music of the dinner-bell is always welcome to the healthy man or woman—like the working man or woman who eats a plain meal at noonday, or to people of easier lives who enjoy a rich dinner in the evening. But to the Dyspeptic there is no music in the dinner-bell—calls him to a trial for which he knows he is unfit. No one can enjoy a meal, or get nourishment and strength from it, knowing that pain and distress will follow after. The true course, even for healthy people, is to help the digestive system, from time to time, with that excellent tonic medicine, Mother Seigel's Syrup.
Mr. Michael Bureau, of Stanham, Quebec County, P. Q., writes: "For some time I suffered from indigestion. I had headaches which made life misery. I could not sleep at night and after eating I felt a sensation of fullness and pain, with heart palpitation. I took no medicine for this illness except Mother Seigel's Syrup and was cured when I had used one bottle of it."
