The famous artist Von Lenbach had one great dominant principle-that out of nature one should grasp and hold fast but one thing in portraiture, the head; that this exponent of the soul must stand out in undisturbed unity: whether dress or form, must distract and weaken the impression that the head should produce; that a portrait to attain its highest aim and signif-cance must look out from a background of nothingness and must be shorn of every détail that interferes with this unity of purpose.—Cosmopolitan.
