Tramps And Novelists.

Extraordinary Careers of Popular Writers.

"What! Jack London only thirty-seven! I thought he was about sixty!"

The remark, made in hearing of the writer, concerning the popular American author, who recently celebrated his thirty-seventh birthday, can be easily understood by those acquainted with the career of this amazing novelist; for he has crowded into his thirty-seven years the experiences of an army of adventurers. He has been in turn, sailor, gold miner, tramp, writer, Socialist lecturer, and journalist. When he was seventeen he shipped before the mast as an able seaman, went to Russia as a seal-hunter, and served at divers times in various capacities. He joined the rush to Klondyke, tramped over the United States and Canada many thousands of miles, having more than one jail experience because he possessed no fixed place of abode and had no visible means of support, and after serving as a war correspondent in the Russo-Japanese War started on a seven-year's cruise round the world in a fifty-foot ketch-rig yacht.

In 1900 he wrote his first book, "The Son of the Wolf," and since then have followed many other equally stirring romances by this astonishing world-tramping novelist.

ROLLING STONES.

Jack London's career is unique, but it is partly equalled by that of other writers. There was the late Guy Boothby, who died before he was thirty-nine, and who was a sheep-raiser, conjurer, actor, a pearl diver, a gold digger, and a sailor before he became a writer. Also Mr. Frank Bullen, happily still with us, who began life as an errand boy and ultimately drifted to sea, serving in various capacities up to and including chief mate in all parts of the world. He has been in a mutiny and experienced a shipwreck, after which he found his way to Havana, where, in order to buy bread, he accepted the post of billiard-marker at a tiny hotel. To quote his own words, "I drifted about from shore to shore, always having to ship before the mast again when I came to England."

A typical example of the rolling stone is Mr. Bart Kennedy, whose career reminds one very much of that of Jack London. As he himself says, he picked up his education in knocking about the world. When he was six he was working as a half-timer in a cotton mill near Manchester, and there he remained until he was twenty, when he went to sea before the mast. He has tramped the United States from end to end, worked as a labourer, lived and fought with Indians, and gold-mined in the Klondyke long before the gold rush. Then he drifted on to the stage and tried his luck as an opera singer and actor, but as he laughingly confessed to the writer on one occasion, "not possessing the voice of a Caruso or the histrionic genius of an Irving, I decided to see what adventures lay in Fleet Street."

An Amazing Biography.

Mark Twain, of course, was a Mississippi pilot and an "anything-he-could-find-to-cuss," as he once expressed it, before he became a writer; but it is doubtful if any author has passed through such vicissitudes of fortune as Maxime Gorky, the famous Russian novelist, who some time ago wrote the following condensed autobiography:

"1378, shoemaker's apprentice; 1879, apprentice in a drawing office; 1882, dish washer on board a steamboat; 1883, baker; 1884, hall porter; 1885, baker; 1886, chorister in a travelling operatic company; 1887, selling apples in the street; 1888, candidate for suicide; 1891, copying clerk in a lawyers' office; 1892, tramping across Russia; 1893, casual labourer in the railway service; 1894, published my first short story."

The secret of Gorky's success, of course, lies in the wonderful manner in which he has described his own experience of lower life. Most of his works are short stories, dealing chiefly with the lowest classes of society, full of life and colour, and frequently founded on incidents which came within the author's own experience.

Settle The Question Right.

However the battle is ended, Though proudly the victor comes, With flaunting flag and neighing nag And echoing roll of drums: Still truth proclaims this motto: In letters of living light, No question is ever settled, Until it is settled right.

Though the heel of the strong oppressor May grind the weak in the dust, And the voices of fame with one acclaim May call him great and just: Let those who applaud take warning, And keep this motto in sight, No question is ever settled, Until it is settled right.

Let those who have taken courage, Though the enemy seem to have won; If he be in the wrong, though his ranks are strong, The battle is not yet done. For sure as the morning follows The darkest hour of the night, No question is ever settled, Until it is settled right.

O men, bowed down with labour, O women, young yet old, O heart, oppressed in the toiler's breast, And crushed by the power of gold, Keep on with your weary battle Against triumphant might; No question is ever settled, Until it is settled right.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

As Children Do.

Sometimes, when night is creeping down And all the world about him dim, And he must go to Sleepytown, You lie down at the side of him And whisper soothing little things, In childish words, such as your fame To tell the sound of bee-like wings, And how the firefly gets its flame.

And soon the world grows darker yet And to the little fellow's eyes Strange, hidden dangers now beset The shadow places in the skies; But you speak low and comforting And tell him none of them are there, That near him is not anything, But what is kind and good and fair.

Then trembling come his little hands Out through the dark and find your face, As though by touch he understands That he is in the safest place; And so with fingers on your cheek He sighs contentedly to sleep, And you—-you may not even speak, So very, very still you keep.

Some time you, as a little child, Shall fare into an unknown night And shall yearn for the stars that smiled, With all their soothing, drowsy light, And you, as little children do, May grope out through the darks of space, And sigh in peace to sleep, when you At last have touched your Father's face.

Bankers Doing Well.

Mr. W. Poole, of Adelaide Street, today had a letter from Critchell Bros., of Belleoram, written on the 20th inst., in which they say that the bankers are doing very well. The Acme and the Winifred arrived that day with 230 and 170 qts. respectively on their second trips after a week's fishing. They report all the rest of the fleet doing very well. This is the second trip with the vessels and the banking voyage has had a very auspicious opening. The boats along the shore from Port aux Basques down were doing splendidly and take daily from 12 to 14 qts. of codfish.

A Terrible Case.

The assault upon a little girl committed at Conception Harbour, to which the Telegram referred yesterday, we learn to-day is a harrowing case. It seems that the child's mother, at a late hour went to the house of a friend who was ill, leaving the little one in her bed alone. The party who attacked her and who is 24 years old, was at the house where the child's mother visited, and seeing her there and knowing the little girl was alone, slipped quietly on ran to the house has been seriously indisposed as a result. The man is now in Holyrood Jail and last evening a preliminary enquiry into the case was held by Magistrate O'Toole.

Fishery Conditions.

According to reports received all the ice have moved off the coast around Port aux Basques and Channel. The waters at both these places are teeming with codfish and daily handliners secure good hauls, the weather being such as to allow them to get on the grounds in their boats.

Another Arrest at Conception Harbor.

Yesterday afternoon Constable Lawlor, who was despatched to Holyrood on special duty, arrived in the city in charge of a man named Woodford, belonging to Conception Harbour, and who was arrested under warrant charged with assaulting and obstructing railway conductors. The prisoner was arraigned before Judge Knight to-day and was remanded for eight days.

How to Make Thick And Pretty Hair.

Soaps and artificial shampoos ruin many beautiful heads of hair. Few people know that a teaspoonful of good stallax dissolved in a cup of hot water has a natural affinity for the hair, and makes the most delightful shampoo imaginable. It leaves the hair brilliant, soft, and wavy, cleanses the scalp completely, and greatly stimulates the hair growth. The only drawback is that stallax seems rather expensive. It comes to the chemist only in sealed ¼ lb. packages, which retail at half a crown. However, as this is sufficient for fifteen or twenty shampoos, it really works out very cheaply in the end. For an actual hair-grower nothing equals pure boranum. It is quite harmless, and sets the hair-roots tingling with new life.

His Only Subject.

Mademoiselle van Vorst, in a recent book, tells a story of a dinner, at Chicago given by the ambitious wife of a millionaire tanner. The lady noticed, to her annoyance, that her husband did not speak a word to the smart guests, and when she got an opportunity she whispered angrily: "Why don't you talk?" "What's the good?" replied the tanner contemptuously. "There ain't one of 'em as knows a thing about leather!"

A Million Revenue Contribution.

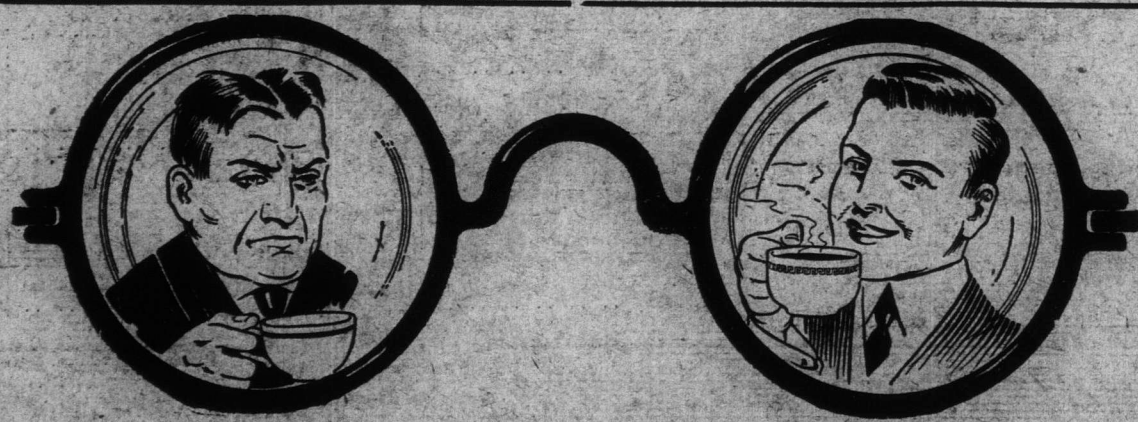

In moving the adoption of the report at the 30th annual meeting of the Off-License Association at the Connaught Rooms, Holborn, recently, the chairman, Mr. P. McKechnie, senior, of Bowen and McKechnie, pointed out that the revenue derived from the sale of intoxicants amounted last year to close upon £42,000,000, or nearly a million more than the expenditure on the Navy, while it was estimated that the number of persons to whom the trade afforded means of subsistence was close upon 600,000. The banquet of the Society was held after the meeting, under the presidency of Mr. Douglas Crossman, when a gathering of about 400 members of the trade assembled. Among those present were Sir Edward Mann, Sir Thomas Dewar, Mr. Harry Lawson, M.P., Mr. P. McKechnie, Mr. J. Mackie, J.P., Mr. W. Harrison, J.P., Mr. W. Phesey, etc., etc. The toast of the House of Parliament, proposed by Sir Edward Mann, was responded to by Mr. H. Lawson, M.P.
