CHAPTER XIII.
The Amateur Physician.

"Don't trouble, Mr. Berton," he said, with a laugh. "I'm as right as ninepence now, and I've got a child's horror of medicine."

The fingers unclosed from round the bottle, and allowed it to slip to its place, and locking the cupboard swiftly, Guildford Berton came back to his place.

"Very well," he said. "Oh, yes, you are all right now."

His face was so pale, so white, indeed, and there was so sudden, and strange a hoarseness in his voice, that Cyril looked at him with surprise.

"Hallo!" he said. "Do you feel queer?"

"No no," replied Guildford Berton. "The—the putting your arm in its place—it's rather a ticklish operation, and it upset my nerves a little, that's all."

Cyril looked at him with a feeling rather akin to remorse. After all, this sullen-browed individual, with the strange repelling manner, must be a better sort of fellow than he, Cyril, had thought him.

He held out his hand.

"I've all the more reason to be grateful to you," he said. "And I am Good-night. I'll come over and report progress to-morrow; but, anyhow, you ought to have been a doctor, you know."

Berton forced a smile, and, taking the lantern, lighted his patient to the gate, and with another good-night and repeated thanks, Cyril stepped outside.

The gate dropped to with a dull clang, and Guildford Berton fell against the wall, and, shaking and shuddering, wiped the thick drops of cold sweat from his brow.

"Heaven, it—it was a temptation!"

he muttered brokenly. "Another moment and I should have done it!"

He raised his hand as if it were heavy as lead, and shook his clinched fist after his guest.

"Curse you!" he muttered. "Take care—take care!"

CHAPTER XIV.
True Love's Passion.

Norah, as Cyril turned away from the hall, passed the earl and Guildford Berton without a word, intending to go to her own room; but the earl stepped aside, and opening the drawing-room door motioned to her to enter with stately courtesy, and, following her, closed the door.

There was a look of haughty displeasure on his face, and his keen eyes regarded her sternly.

"May I trouble you to give me an account of this accident?" he said, icily.

Norah raised her eyes.

"It all happened as Mr. Burne said, papa," she answered.

"I prefer to hear it from your own lips," he said.

Norah quietly related the incident; but her voice trembled as she told of her discovery of Cyril's injury.

He behaved very bravely, papa," she said, her long lashes sweeping her cheeks.

"I have no doubt," he said; "but it did not warrant his taking advantage of your situation. He should have sent here for a carriage for you; but I imagine we must not expect grapes from thistles."

A flush rose to Norah's face.

"I am sorry he has offended you, papa," she said in a low voice. "It was as much my fault—"

She stopped, and her face grew pale. "And he went without a word of thanks," she exclaimed, "as if he had committed a crime instead of doing all he could—"

The earl made a gesture of displeasure.

"Oh, please!" he said. "There is nothing I dislike so much as heroics. No doubt," with the suggestion of a sneer, "you thanked him sufficiently."

Norah's face flamed.

"But I wish to tell you that I do not desire your intimacy with this young man to continue."

Norah started slightly and looked up at him. If he had treated her with even the semblance of fatherly kindness she would have told him all that passed between Cyril Burne and herself that night; but his cold words froze her lips.

"I do not approve of him," he concluded, as if that finished the subject.

"But—why, papa?" she asked in a low voice. "He—he is a gentleman, you said yourself—"

The earl frowned.

"It seems that I was mistaken. No, I could not be mistaken; but one may be a gentleman and yet not a desirable acquaintance. I have heard enough of this Mr. Burne to be convinced that he is not a person to whom I can extend my friendship."

"You have heard!" said Norah, wonderingly. "From whom, papa? From Mr. Berton?" and her lips grew compressed.

The earl looked down.

"The name of my informant is of little consequence."

Mother-Made, Quick Acting Cough Syrup

Should be Kept Handy in Every Home—Easily Prepared and Costs Little.

Mothers, you'll never know what you are missing until you make up this inexpensive, quick-acting cough syrup and try it. Children love its pleasant taste and nothing else will loosen a cough or chest cold and heal the inflamed or swollen throat membranes with such ease and promptness. It's equally as good for grown-ups as for children.

This splendid cough syrup is made by pouring 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-oz bottle and filling the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50—a clear saving of $2.

The moment it touches the inflamed, cold-congested membranes that line the throat and air passages, the healing begins, the phlegm loosens, soreness leaves, cough spasms lessen and soon disappear. In addition, this cooling cough syrup acts quicker than you ever thought possible. Hoarseness and ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Excellent for bronchitis, whooping cough, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over for its quick healing effect on the membranes.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money returned. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

the consequence," he said, coldly. "Enough that I am satisfied with the information. Do not let us continue the subject; it is distasteful to me."

Norah stood for a moment, her eyes bent on the ground, then she murmured—

"Good-night, papa."

He opened the door for her, making no movement toward kissing her, and she escaped.

Once in her own room, she flung her hat aside, and sinking into a chair hid her face in her hands.

Her heart was beating wildly, but stern as her father's speech and manner had been, its throbs were more of joy than of sorrow.

That great crisis which comes in most women's lives had come to hers. A man had told her that he loved her! Sometimes a girl has to ask her heart the question: "Do I love him in return?" but Norah, though no words of love had ever been uttered to her before, had no need to ask the question. Love needs no instructor. The lesson of his presence is readily learned in every woman's breast; and Norah, as she sat with her face hidden, even from her glass, could feel his words singing in her heart.

She sat and thought of him—how handsome he was, how brave, how kind, how good! Surely, in all the wide, wide world, there was not another man like him. And this best of heroes, who was quick and clever and prompt, who had displayed such courage, hiding his pain from her for so long, loved her!

With the joy of the knowledge there was mixed a thrill of pride that seemed to raise her above all others of her sex.

What could he have seen in her to love? she asked herself again and again. She who was nothing but a simple, ignorant girl, while he was so clever and strong, such a hero among men!

How sweetly he had asked her for her dear rose; how humbly he had bent over her hand! She took her right hand from her face and looked at it, and, slowly raising it to her lips, kissed it where his lips had touched it.

Did she love him? Why, her love seemed proclaiming itself in every trembling limb. Her heart was full, full of him; his voice rang in her ears. She could feel his kiss upon her hand still.

"Cyril, Cyril!" she murmured unconsciously, and in the stillness of night the faint breeze outside seemed to echo his name, lovingly, caressingly.

Then there flashed upon her mind, too full of her lover to have thought of it before, the remembrance of her father's anger, and the words he had spoken. He had forbidden her to continue knowing Cyril Burne; he had heard something. What was it that he had heard? Whatever it was, he must have heard it from Guildford Berton; and as Norah thought of him she shuddered faintly with absolute dislike. He had stood there by the door, saying nothing, with his dark face sombre and sinister.

Why should he have spoken falsely of Cyril Burne?—for that he had spoken falsely she was as certain as that she sat there, with Cyril's kiss burning on her hand.

What should she do? Cyril, when he had told her that he loved her, had asked her not to be angry, but to wait. He would speak to her again.

The warm color suffused her neck and face at the thought. Should she listen to him? Could she disobey her father?

The door opened and Harman came in, and as she proceeded to undress her mistress she cast anxious glances at her. At last she said, as if she could not help herself—

"Oh, my lady, I hope you are not hurt!"

"No," said Norah, for she was lost in thought—half delicious, half painful. "You heard of the accident?"

"Yes, my lady," replied Harman; "one of the grooms was up in the village, and brought down word," and she touched Norah gently and carefully, as if she expected every moment to feel her wince.

"No, I am not even scratched; but I might have been hurt if it had not been for—"

She stopped; she could not speak Cyril's name.

"Yes, I know, my lady," said Harman, warmly. "John says that the gentleman risked his life almost, and it was a wonder he wasn't killed."

Norah winced then.

"Tell—tell me what they say," she said in a low voice. It was delightful to hear of his bravery from another person's lips.

Harman gave the account she had heard from the groom, and dwelt upon Cyril's courage as only a woman can, and Norah listened with bent head, seeming scarcely to breathe.

Harman went at last, but Norah still sat in the low chair thinking, dwelling with joy that was almost painful in its intensity upon every word he had spoken; going back to the first night she had heard his voice on the terrace, the night he had addressed her, all unconscious that she was near, in words of passionate love.

At last she went to bed, but it was hours before she slept; and in her dreams he still bent over her, his handsome face all anxious and troubled on her account—on hers!

When she awoke the next morning it was with the consciousness that some one was in the room, and raising herself on her elbow she saw Becca South standing beside the bed, and looking down at her with a peculiar expression in her black eyes. Then she remembered that she had not locked her door last night.

"Becca," she said.

Becca came nearer and held the curtain back, still looking at her.

"I've come to help you," she said. "Aunt's got one of her bad headaches, and can't move this morning. She's very sorry, she says, and begs your ladyship will overlook it."

"Oh, poor Harman!" said Norah, sympathetically; "I am so sorry. Go and tell her that she must not think of getting up, and not to trouble about me in the least."

While Becca was gone Norah got up and found a bottle of eau de Cologne.

"Take this and bathe her forehead," Becca, she said, "and tell her on no account to trouble about me."

Becca went again, and returned smelling strongly of the scent. She had poured half of it on her own handkerchief.

Severe Head

Resulted From Derange
It is in vain to try to restore the healthful action of the organs until the liver and bowels are right.

And just here is where the kidney medicines fail. Kidney ailments almost invariably with constipation and tropical liver. The whole work of the blood is thrown on the and in time they fall to strain. The poison in it gives rise to severe headache in the back and tired, drooping.

Because they act directly on the liver and bowels, as well as the kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney Pills are eminently successful in the treatment of kidney derangement.
