

HELEN MOIR

OR— LOVE AND HONOUR.

A TALE OF THE CLYDE.

With four men bearing, and one on each side carrying a torch, the little procession was formed, and began to move forward on the road to Guelph.

Terrible as the scene was to both of them, but especially to Helen, they pressed forward in the anxiety to hear news of Hermann.

At last she found him. Was it instinct or Providence who guided her to the place? Who shall tell? But in a little hollow, and thickly surrounded by others of the 33rd who had fallen, she saw a form stretched on the ground which she instantly recognized as his.

She thought he was dead, her wail was that of wild passionate bereavement but a surgeon who was called to the spot gave her the joyful intelligence that he lived, and under his directions he was carried to the rear, where the horses stood by the wayside.

Such in brief words was the tale to which Edwin listened; then he had his to tell of all that had befallen them since they came to the front.

What was the packet contain, about which he is so solicitous? asked Edwin. "I cannot tell," replied his uncle musingly.

"I would have it cleared up if I were you," counselled Edwin. "To what intent. Only perchance, to recall sad and unpleasant memories, which had better be forgotten, as I desire a great portion of the past to lie."

"Possibly not," sighed his uncle. "I have ever found him impervious to kind words, yet the approach of death may change him, and at all events I will satisfy the impulse of my own heart by retaining good for evil."

The lights of the town were now in view, and soon the heights were descended and they entered the narrow noisy streets where the bustle and confusion continued without intermission.

Richard's extravagance of joy at the unexpected arrival of Helen and her father may not be described. It was moderated only by the critical state of Hermann, otherwise it might have made him in reality, what he resembled a body demerit.

Notwithstanding the heading of the Ministerial press, the Government by no means feel confident of success at the coming elections. Several of their supporters have intimated that they will not face the music again.

New York, May 27.—The Herald's special from Havana says:—Venezuela, advised received via St. Thomas states that President Blanco has captured Valjeira, and that Salazar, ex-rebel chief-tain, has been captured, court-martialed and shot.

SUNDAY RECREATION.—Two hundred thousand persons, on an average, through the year, each Sunday, resort to the various lager-beer gardens and other places of recreation and refreshment in and around New York city.

THE OIL TRADE.—The growth of the oil business in America is one of the most wonderful features of the age. It is only eighteen years ago that Luther Atwood first made coal oil and offered it for sale; and it was four years later that it came into use for illuminating purposes.

A live lizard was found by a well-digger in New Market, Va., the other day, twenty-five feet below the surface.

FARM FOR SALE IN ERIN.—200 acres in 2 lots, cornering one another, viz: Lot 13, east half 7th concession, new frame house, frame barn, 70 acres cleared, remainder in wood and cedar.
