MOTHER AND SON.

The Boy's Thirst for and His Desire to Impart Information.

They were mother and son. She a womanly little woman, about 27 years of age, while he, the spoiled and only child, aged about six. As they seated themserves in the cabin one could easily opserve that the mother's thoughts were not of her surroundings, but elsewhere, while the child, probably its first trip on a ferryboat, was

The child said nothing, but did con-siderable squirming in his seat until the gong rang in the engine-room for the boat to start, when the awe in his voice and his large brown eyes opened to their full extent, he said in a stage whisper that could be hearb by everyone within the cabin: "What's that?" 'That's the gong for the boat to "What makes the gong go?"

"The captain." "What does he make the gong go So the engineer can start the boat.

"What does he want to start the boat for?" "So we can go to the other side." 'What do we want to go to the other

"How did all the water get there?"

'Yes, so the boats could run across.' (After a long silence, looking intently at his mother's hat)—"Ma?"

'Well, dear?' "You trimmed that hat, didn't you?" "Sh-sh-sh!"

'Well, you did." 'Keep still and don't bother me, or shall be compelled to whip you."
"You did trim it, 'cause I seed you." (As she jerks him arm)-"Keep still!" Eut you did trim it, just the same, and you know it.'

'Well, you trimmed it, just same. As the mother boxed the child's ears and dragged him onto the deck, we could hear through the boo-hoos,"Well, you did trim it, and you know you did, 'cause I seed you."

THE LATE W. A. Conchman, of Clark county, Kentucky, was the perpetrator of an extraordinary practical joke. Returning from a hunting trip one evening, he was attracted to a country church where a revival was in progress. After watching the service for a while he climbed up on the roof to get a better view through the hole where the stove-pipe was meant to go. In the excitement of the evening one of the congregation shouted out: "Gabriel, blow your horn, I'm ready to go!" The temptation was too great for Conchman and, putting his horn to his lips, he blew a blast through the flue-hole their men, and they took their efeat and stampeded the congregation to a with a good grace.
