A neighbor, who had seen a burglar in the shop, awakened the owner at midnight, and Steiers, half clothed, ran to the building to find Fraser" inside. Shouting for help, he burst through the front door and grappled with the man. They rolled over on the iron littered floor. Steiers was underneath, and his head struck an anvil. For a moment he was dazed. Then he grasped his opponent by the throat and choked nim almost into insensibility.

The burglar picked up his revolver, which had fallen from his pocket in the struggle, and made desperate attempts to kill Steiers, but the machinist was too powerful and wrenched away the weapon. The two were still fighting, when help came.

"Fraser" had been pummeled so bady that he was almost ready to rall, but he staggered to the rear door and hurried down an alley. The machinist shouted to his rescuers to stop the man, but they failed to comprehend, and Fraser escaped. Searchers found beneath a window three bits and braces stolen from the hop.
