ALL SOON TO BE LIKE THE BIRDS

Flying Machines at $10 Each Sinking of Knight Commander Are Promised.

A Winged Nation Within Five Years American Liner Arabia Carried Big Is Holland's Prophecy-Safer Than the Bicycle.

New York, July 26. - John P. Holland, inventor of a submarine torpedo boat, announces that his flying machines will not cost more than $10, and that within five years men will be flying from this city to Chicago in a day. His apparatus consists of four wings with bamboo frames, which will be attached to the arms and waist of the person using them. The apparatus will not weigh more than 25 pounds, and he declares any man will be able to use it on sight, and fly without any elaborate preliminary training. Mr. Holland has been working on the problem for 34 years and has made four different types of flying machines only to discard them because the principle was wrong. In his fifth effort he has adopted the aeroplane principle after a long study of birds in flight. He is holding back the details of the construction of his flying machine until the Government grants him a patent. In discussing his apparatus Mr. Hol-

This flying machine, or whatever you want to call it, will consist of four wings. Those with which the first trials soon will be conducted will be in two sizes, one pair seven and the other ten feet long. This will give a the British steamer Knight Command-does not discourage him, as he never spread of from fifteen to twenty feet er. Her crew numbered 68, in-expected an easy victory. Some years from tip to tip. They will be applied directly to the person in such a manner that appropriate muscles will manipulate them without more exertion than is necessary for ordinary walking. In fact, the operation will be far less exhausting than walking, for the violent part of it will be only during the starting or ascending, and while the person is descending.

"In less than five years man will spread his wings and fly like a bird. Without any more exertion than is required by the act of ordinary walking will make flights at the rate of from 50 to 100 miles an hour. He will fly to Chicago in a day. He will make a short flight to Washington to see his friends and will fly back in time for supper, all without more troble or energy than would be expended in the same time at walking; probably with out as much exertion.

will take a course with or against the wind, or at any angle he wishes, at any height above the surface he may find convenient or desirable. He will beat his wings vigorous ly, for a few strokes, just as any bird and then. settling in a fixe course, will ride the air without any more effort than does the swallow that skims and dips. He will use no other device to attain buoyancy, but simply will mount to the height sought by the same means as do creatures endowed by nature with feathers. In investigating and experimenting I have found a curious similarity about controls both-namely that the center of gravity always must port, and the thrust always must be in the greater density of the water." with the man hundreds of feet in the

"Anything about the mechanical part of the device could fall without doing damage. It would not cause a fall, for the mere turning of the flyer to a gentle angle toward the ground would bring him down slowly and safely. One of the wings, or perhaps two of them, might be carried away completely without causing a fall.

'There's nothing occult about the flight of the bird. Like everything else it's merely a demonstration of mechanical principles. The bird is heavier than the air, yet floats in it. Man is heavier than the air and he can float in it, too, if he will go about it rightthat is, just as the bird does. His muscles are as strong, proportionately, and he is equal to the first efforts to mount the element in which he is to swim exactly as he swims in water. The rest is

"As a matter of fact, only one-tenth of a bird's energy is spent in sustaining power: the remainder is devoted entirely to propulsion. The aeroplane action of the wings supports the body. I proposed that theory years ago." Flying machines are being constructbeing built with the utmost secrecy, and will not be shown until the Washington authorities have fully protected
