The retrospect of the V. C. In arranging the affairs of the late Earl of Airlie, who died in Colorado recently, it comes to light that his estates, extending over a considerable part of Forfarshire, and stretching into Perthshire, yielded a rental of about $130,000 for the crop of 1879, representing an increase within the last twenty-five years of about $50,000. This was due to the recelamation of land from moor and to the large amount expended in building, draining and fencing operations under agreements entered into by proprietor and tenants at the commencement of the leases.
