TEST FOR PRECIOUS STONES.

A GOOD diamond is much colder than an imitation, and the lapidaries say that the best way to detect this difference in temperature is to touch the stones to the tongue. Sapphires, emeralds, rubies, garnets, and other precious stones may be tested in the same way—the real stone is invariably colder than the imitation. The lapidaries do not give a reason for the difference, but it may be found, perhaps, in the greater density of the real stones.

PRESIDENT HADLEY, of Yale College, one of the best-known authorities on the subject in the United States, writes an article of the most timely interest on "The Formation and Control of Trusts," in the November Scribners. He gives a very clear statement of the motives and conditions that lead to their organization, and points out with reassuring emphasis some of the causes that are already tending toward their limitation as mere speculative enterprises. He believes that the question of State ownership or control will become less and less acute as a political issue.
