Lecturer Cheerfully Admits He Never Had Time to Attend a Seance.

The popular weaves for this Automa for all kinds of Suit and Gewn-making are all gathered into our showreoms, making an aggregation of relationship claimed to have been attracted under Thomas Williams of Chicago lecturreally choice goeds - many patterns of which are exclusively con- vertised as on "Spiritualism." At the end of the address an auditor asked the chairman if Mr. Williams had ever attended a seance. The chairman transmitted the query in audible tones, for Mr. Williams' hearing is impaired. "I never had the time, but I have read about them;" was the reply, which roused the audience to seething emotion. There were more questions asked in 30 seconds than Mr. Williams could have evaded in 30 years. One gentleman shook his fist in view of the total inefficacy of the categoric limitations to which he was confined by the chairman. A lady of noble proportions arose, and, removing her coat, revealed white vestments, in which she approached the platform, while excitement grew. Her designs were pacific, as her raiment symbolized. She had been consulting the "Spellingthe chairman if Mr. Williams had ever cific, as her raiment symbolized. She had been consulting the "Spelling-book Superseded," and had a question

"Will the lecturer deny that the word Spiritualism comes from the Greek word, spireo?" she enquired. This being duly interpreted to the lecturer, he rubbed his hands and chuckled, and took advantage of the verbal lapse from Latin to Greek.

"The Greek word for spirit is pneuma," he announced, and the lady did not recover consciousness until the not recover consciousness until

Meen Death Ends All,
"Don't get excited," was a frequent and not unnecessary admonition to the audience, as Mr. Williams proceeded to unfold the faith that is in him. He belongs to the Christadelphian body, popularly known as soul-sleepers, whose cardinal belief is that when you are dead it is for a long time. He proved conclusively to his own and the chairman's satisfaction that those who think they may go either to heaven or any other remote region when they die are utterly misguided persons.
It is the Serpent in Eden, according to Mr. Williams is that when a man is dead he is indeed truly and really dead.

left behind, while the man goes on to another life, then the Spiritualists are right, and the Serpent told the truth. This is a tsubborn fact," commented Mr. Williams, with the evident conviction that the Serpent was not built that way. He took up the old argument as to whether the brain is the origin or merely the channel of thought, and decided in favor of the sight, he found it otherwise. The Serpent had declared that man would live forever, but this was another of the Serpent's tarradiddles upon which no reliance could be placed.
