Two Kinds of Reserves. Sir Thomas White then took up the juestion of treating reserve as capital. He said there were two kinds of reserves, viz., real reserves and bookkeeping reserves. Many a small concern had started years ago, made money carefully and honestly, putting back part of its profits into the business and charging off every year a certain amount for depreciation. In the case of such a concern, it would be unjust not to treat reserve as capital. It would be unfair to permit such a concern to make only seven per cent. cannonade, the aeroplanes returned i upon, say a capital of $50,000 if its safety to our lines. unimpaired assets were really $190 0.1. The amendment which point reads as follows:

"An incorporated company may include as part of its capital its actual, inimpaired reserve, rest or accumulat ed profits." The minister went on to explain that this section would not benefit corporations with merely bookkeeping reserves. Without specifying any particular company, ne said that it was "The prompt arrival of the fire dewell known that many public service corporations did not charge off any thing for depreciation and piled up fictitous reserves with the idea of gation, the police department tonight arrived at the conclusion that the fire getting a big price when they came taken over by the public. Coming to the problem of watered stock, Sir Thomas said it presented the converse proposition to unimpaired reserves. The proposals of the government had been severely criticized be cause they taxed too heavily the conern whose capital stock was smaller n amount than its real paidup capital while the big corporation, with water ed stock, escaped altogether.

The government, therefore, had determined to get at the real paid-up capital. A company will not be allowed to escape taxation by having an mmense issue of stock outstanding. No at the date of its issue shall be deemmatter what the stock might be, the ed to be the amount paid up on such government would go behind capitalia stock.
