Our Houses as Our Mirrors

By RUTH CAMERON

HAVE you ever happened to observe how largely a house absorbs an atmosphere from those who dwell in it? This thought came strongly to me the other day when I went to visit an old friend and found a little note saying that he had been unexpectedly called away for a few hours and inviting me to get the key from a neighbor, enter and make myself comfortable.

My friend is one of those beautifully hospitable people who have the pleasant art of making every guest feel thoroughly at home, and her house must have been particularly impressed by the spirit of the moment I entered. I felt at home. The empty house greeted me. I missed my friend, of course, but I felt no sense of constraint or formality, as I would have in so many homes. The house was full of that spirit of hospitality which its mistress possesses.

Perhaps you will remind me that the character of the furnishings may have had something to do with my impression. I grant it. The congenial magazines and books and pictures, the comfortable and homelike hangings and the softness of the cushions, all give me part of my welcome. But not all. I insist that the spirit of hospitality was in that house.

There are many curious and somewhat unattractive old-fashioned homes, no matter how tasteful and pleasant the surroundings, you never feel wholly at ease. Nor is it simply your host's personality that makes the difference. It is your own in-chill constraint on the edge of your chair. You are oppressed and expelled by the atmosphere of the house.

Again, there are homes which seem to have a certain atmosphere about them. Some have been built by a man who has been better than a new one. That is partially true, yet I know many new homes which, being inhabited by an awkward, restless people, seem to breathe the spirit of peace on all who enter there.

Along these same lines I have another theory, and that is that household pets also take part in the atmosphere. The dog finally became so snappy that they had to get him out of the neighborhood. He was given to the family carpenter, and the carpenter, who had been invited into the room and welcomed me, I could hardly be convinced that it was actually our neighborhood bête-noire. But it was. Living with pleasant people he had become pleasant.

Again I know a wonderful black Persian puss with queer uncatlike habits who is the close friend of a distinctly eccentric and wonderful woman; and I have been particularly impressed in the same case an awkward, restless people, seem to breathe the spirit of peace on all who enter there.

Truly, it is an interesting theory, this idea that people with strong characteristics affect their surroundings. Try it out some day with your friends.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

The Most Fashionable Club of Paris and the Man at Head of It—Dainty Story of a Noted Frenchman

Of all the fashionable clubs in Paris, the most absolutely exclusive is undoubtedly the Cercle Agricole, nicknamed the Pomme-de-terre, which is composed entirely of members of the old territorial aristocracy of France. It keeps its doors tightly closed to parvenus and to any other persons, foreign or native, who does not belong to the "old set."

Once in a long while, perhaps, a man belonging to the pick of the diplomatic corps has been allowed to join, but on the special invitation only of the president, who is the Duc de Mortemart. It will please those who know him to hear that he has just been re-elected as the annual manager of the club.

His father, the eleventh duke, Victorien de Mortemart, held the presidency of the Cercle Agricole until his death, which occurred in 1883. Arthur, twelfth Duke of Mortemart, is in rather respectably good luck like his father, a trifle Louis Quatorze in his tastes and manners, which are fully shared by his son, the present Duke of Mortemart, who is the direct ancestor of the celebrated beauty, Marquise de Fontenoy, now straight through to the life of Louis XIV. Madame de Fontenoy was as much recalled to the lovers of history, the daughter of the first Duke of Mortemart, once governor of Paris, a man whose intelligence and savoir-faire were not surpassed by any in modern France.

His eldest son, François Marie-Joseph-Laurent, Victorien de Rochechouart, Marquis de Mortemart, Prince de Tonny, is also the worthy descendant of a long line of men who were in arms, diplomacy and statesmanship. He is married to Marguerite Françoise Marie de La Rochechouart, of the Dukes of Doudeuxville.

The domain and the princely title of Tonny-Château were granted during the twelfth century to the Mortemarts for the use of the eldest son in his own right. The other members of the Mortemart clan are known as counts and countesses de Rochechouart. This is one of the finest names in Europe, and therefore they need not be disconcerted, especially since the first Count de Rochechouart was in his time a monarch's favorite, and the Duc de Mortemart, also Duc de Vivonne, was in 1675, viceroys of Sicily, and best the Spaniards on land and sea to such an extent, that for years afterwards they brave as they were, actually blanching beneath their tanned skins at the mere mention of his name.

"FOR 15 YEARS I HAD ECZEMA"

Mr. C. E. Cramer, farmer, Cramersburg, Pa., writes: "For fifteen years I had eczema and for about six years also suffered from itching piles. Seven different doctors were consulted in Canada and the United States, with only temporary relief. The eczema started on the legs and there was almost constant itching and smarting. Sometimes I would have to scratch half the night and get little or no rest or sleep. The very first application of Dr. Chase's Ointment brought relief and after the third application the itching stopped entirely. I now believe the cure to be complete and attribute it to Dr. Chase's Ointment and Nerve Food. The latter was used to cure the blood. The Ointment healed up the sores. I am ready to take my oath that this statement is true and correct."

Daily Hints For the Cook

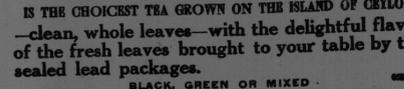

STRAWBERRY TARTS.
The whites of six eggs beaten stiff; add two cups of granulated sugar and beat twenty minutes; add one teaspoonful of vanilla extract. Bake in a form with greased paper at bottom, in slow oven, for one hour. When cold put a thick layer of whipped cream on top, then a layer of whole strawberries, another layer of cream, and decorate top with a few berries.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM.
One of the best rules for this cream calls for the yolks of three eggs, a cup and a half of granulated sugar, one cup of boiling milk, one pint of very rich cream and the juice of a quart of thoroughly ripe berries. Beat the yolks of eggs thoroughly with the sugar; add one cupful of boiling milk and cook the mixture in a double boiler for five minutes. Then add to the hot mixture the cream and juice of berries and take over the fire. Cool, then freeze and serve with dainty white cakes flavored with bitter almond.

GRADING IN SCHOOLS; A TEACHER ANSWERS "STEAD"

To the Editor of the Times:
Sir:—Too often during my teaching experience of a few years, I have seen such a waste of time and energy in the grading of papers. Each time I have felt that I must reply and explain the false view of the writer in this issue. I have thought it better to write to you for information on this matter. In this case, fearing that the teacher is a monster, who is the wrong idea under which "Stead" is laboring must be pointed out. Let me refer to the writer as he for the sake of brevity.

None in the first seven grades to which he seems to refer.

It is a fact worth noting that the children who are most wasteful with books and writing materials are the children of the poor; also that second year pupils seldom grade in the first part of the class, and I might almost say never first.

Many and many a nervous child, writing set papers has failed, while careless children have by luck passed. The few questions on a paper cannot test as a teacher's experience with the mind does.

Probably the gentleman would apologize concerning his remarks on the teaching of arithmetic, if he looked into the matter further. Children who do not know their year's work are treated unkindly when pushed into the next class. How can they do harder work if the easy work was too much for them? We might as well try to build a house and paint it before the foundation was finished. A pupil who does not complete the course in the year is either below the average in brain power, with which the teacher cannot supply him, though she were ever so willing, or else the child has not paid attention to the instruction given, or perhaps has lost much time through illness or other more avoidable causes.

If I could explain some of these matters so that parents of children attending the public schools would see that regular attendance and diligence in preparation of work was shown, there would be fewer children detained each year.

The teachers are not responsible for the course of instruction. It is planned for them. They are simply told to carry it out. It takes a school year to complete it even "passing well." What, then, can be expected of those children who attend perhaps three-quarters of the time, perhaps less, and while attending, are often inattentive, perhaps naughty. Meanwhile the teacher is expected, with unerring patience, to bridge over the work that was lost, help with work unprepared, because pupils went to the picture show, the rink, or other places of amusement, all right in themselves, and came next day with important lessons merely glanced at. If daily tasks were prepared daily, instead of with feverish haste before an examination, there would be a greater percentage of with feverish haste before an examination, there would be a greater percentage of successful children, and work-out, discouraged teachers.

As for parents teaching what teachers are paid to do. Did you ever figure out how far the percentage of your taxes devoted to schools would go if divided among your children? If the children were required to attend for a short time, E. Church, writes me: "I have used half a dozen different hair tonics, but I find HAY'S HAIR REALITY the very best preparation I have ever used for dandruff." You can get it at any drugist's for 50c. or $1.00 per bottle, or from Philo Hay Spec. Co., Newark, N. J., E. Clinton Brown, corner Union and Waterloo streets.

ing is so often so loving, yet so lax. Children don't know what is best for them. But when your little girl or boy comes home with a woeful tale that teacher is crank and favors some more fortunate classmate, just take the much misunderstood teacher's part. Tell your child to try to work harder, be a little more attentive, and try to find out how the teacher wants to be.

We are only human, and, like other mortals, love those who love us, feel when we are misunderstood, though it might not care to confess it. Let us hope therefore that the parents and teachers may work together a little more. If you think your children have too much to do, it is a matter for the legislature, and not for the teaching staff of St. John's.

Changing you for your space, Mr. Editor, I remain,
A CONSCIENTIOUS TEACHER.

ARTILLERYMAN TELLS HIS STORY

Mr. Daniel Fry, North Keppel, Ont., is a pensioner of the British Army. He belonged to the Royal Artillery and was stationed in Toronto in 1850. Mr. Fry is now 86 years of age and attributes his good health to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For three or four years he suffered greatly from constipation, pains in the back and at the bottom of the stomach. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, these troubles have been overcome. He would not be without these pills in the house and finds that by using one or two a week he can keep the bowels and kidneys healthy and active.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are especially appreciated by people of advanced years who have difficulty in keeping the kidneys and bowels regular and active. They are definite and certain in action and can be depended on to bring about the desired effect.
