

HEALTH A DUTY.

DISEASE A CRIME.

The pursuit of health is at present commanding the attention of the public as never before. Even the mad scramble after wealth is gradually giving away to the more earnest seeking after health.

This is as it should be, for to be well, as far as possible, is a duty every one owes to himself, his family and the community in which he lives. Ill-health is an enemy to happiness and a bar to usefulness. When, by attention to the laws of health and the use of proper remedies, it is possible to be well, it is manifestly wrong to be sick. To promote health and to furnish valuable information for reference is the object of this book. The remedies mentioned herein have been long before the public, many times tried and never found wanting.

We do not claim that any one of our remedies is an infallible specific for every disease; but we do claim, without fear of contradiction, that the remedy which has been known for over fifty-six years as N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir, is without a parallel in the history of medicine, for the cure of Colds, Croup, Asthma, Consumption, and all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Consumption, even in its last stages, has been cured by the persistent use of this remedy.

Our other preparations have all become standard remedies where they are known, and are rapidly gaining in favor with the public, as the largely increased sales of the last few years fully demonstrate.

To those who have used our remedies no appeal is necessary. To those who have not used them, but are suffering with some of the diseases these medicines are designed to cure, we appeal, confident that if you will give them a fair trial, you will find in their use immediate relief and a permanent cure.

Trusting that the information contained in this book will be a blessing to many sufferers, and conscious that there is no exaggeration in any of its statements, we send it forth with the full assurance that it will receive at the hands of an intelligent people the full measure of its deserts.
