ANGLO-GERMANIC WAR IS INEVITABLE SAYS DENISON

Col. G. T. Denison Returned From Abroad Speaks of Uneasiness in the Old Country -- Britain in a Bad Way -- Chamberlain to Return to Parliament -- Diminutiveness of French Soldiers.

(Toronto Globe) War is inevitable. The day must come when the armed forces of Britain and Germany will be at each other's throats. This is the opinion of Col. G. T. Denison, who returned on Saturday from an extended visit to the old country and the continent. In the course of an interview Col. Denison said: "I am satisfied that war between Britain and Germany must come some day because the two nations are rivals, jealous rivals in trade, and there will be a final struggle for the supremacy. It will be the story of Athens and Sparta, Rome and Carthage over again. Already in Great Britain there is a fear of the German. There is a feeling that Germany is preparing for an effort to get on top, and throughout the country there is a nervous feeling. I lunched with Rudyard Kipling one day, and he was quite pessimistic as to the way things were going. It was shortly after that he published his poem, 'The City of Brass,' which is a strong indictment of a certain class of people. Among the people who look ahead there is a feeling of uneasiness. Of course there is also a mass of feeling that everything is all right, and always will be, but as Kipling says himself: 'Men, not gods, devised it. And men, not gods, must keep.' 'With regard to the naval situation we must wait until the British Government gets the best naval authority to say which is the best method by which we can spend our money. I am afraid that our politicians of both parties want the money spent in the way most advantageous to their party interests.' Col. Denison is convinced that tariff reform will be one of the main issues of the next general election, and in this connection it may be stated that after an interview with the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, whose guest he was, he was led to the opinion that the leader's health was so improved that his return to active political work was possible. 'I visited Mr. Chamberlain at Highbury,' he said, 'and was pleased to find him better than I expected. He walks with the aid of a stick. Mrs. Chamberlain told me that her husband walks half a mile a day regularly. His mind is as clear and bright as it could be, and he is full of fight and confidence that his cause is sound to carry. I hope and expect to see at the next election his party carry the day, and he will again sit in the House of Commons and cast his vote for tariff reform.' "What are the indications as to the approach of a general election?" "It depends on whether the Lords throw out the budget. At first I was inclined to think that they would not, and that in adopting that course they would be following the wisest plan, giving the Government enough rope and letting them hang themselves. There has, however, been talk on the budget so many new principles of taxation that I think the House of Lords will throw out the bill and that will mean an immediate appeal to the country. There is an opinion that Lloyd-George has not properly considered the difficulties of working out his scheme, and that he will probably amend it himself. The fact of the matter is that the old country is in a very bad way. Going through the country I saw that there were a good many fields out of cultivation. There were but few people working in the fields, and I was told that the cities were full of paupers. There is a great lack of employment. Then I went over to France and was struck by the difference. One saw what protection had done for France. The country was the picture of prosperity. There were beautiful crops everywhere, and everywhere there were people working in the fields. The only waste lands were in the forests, and there was evidence of the practice of the most careful forestry. "There was another thing which struck me in France. I was through France in 1868 and visited the great military camp at Châlons. I was struck by the diminutiveness of the soldiers, for I could look over their heads. Since then there has been a great physical improvement and the increased height of the French infantrymen struck me when I saw a number in Orleans. I should say that the average height is now higher than that in the British line regiments." "30,000 Farm Laborers Wanted" An unprecedented wheat crop is about ready for harvesting in the west—which means months of steady employment for a vast army of men for many months. Watch the papers for further developments. In the meantime get ready. Miss Enid Hutchinson, daughter of Rev. D. Hutchinson, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. B. MacKenzie, Moncton.

THAW WILL DEVOTE LIFE TO LETTERS

New York, Aug. 5.—Harry K. Thaw will devote his life to literature if he wins his fight for freedom from the Matteawan asylum, and anticipating such a victory, his mother, Mrs. Wm. Thaw and her daughter Alice, the former Countess of Yarmouth, have spent about $25,000. It is reported, in fitting up a corner of the new Thaw house on Fifth avenue in Pittsburg as a literary den for Thaw. Both Harry Thaw and his relatives have believed he would succeed in literary work and for a year this has been the main subject under discussion between Harry, Alice and the mother whom they visited him. If permitted to leave the asylum he will go with them to Pittsburg and engage in literary work after a little vacation in Europe to brighten up. Mother and sister will go with him to Europe. Alice Thaw has also decided to cast her lot with her brother in his literary career in case he is liberated and she has already shown some good work by making contracts for Thaw's writings which will surely prove profitable if he is allowed to get out to do the writing. It is claimed by close friends that Alice has secured contracts which will require a full year's work on the part of Harry and herself, and that $20,000 is about the total contracts call for. In connection with this Pittsburg society is discussing a story concerning the devotion of Alice Thaw to her mother and brother. She is said to have recently an offer of marriage from a very rich young business man of Pittsburg, but she has declined it, explaining that her life belongs to her unfortunate brother and to her mother.

ACTUAL NOT THEOLOGICAL UNITY AIMED

Northfield, Mass., Aug. 5.—That there will be individuality with peculiar and personal characteristics after death, and resulting therefrom some theological differences in heaven and different explanations of divine things, these were some of the statements made before the conference here yesterday by Rev. Dr. J. M. Jowett, of Birmingham, England, and they have precipitated a general discussion among the delegates, not all of whom are in harmony with the opinions of the English divine. Dr. Jowett advocated a form of church unity which has set all the ministers here thinking. His subject was The Perfect Man. He severely criticized the lack of harmony and unity among Christian denominations but said what was needed was not theological unity, but actual unity in faith in Christ, and in the grace received from Him. He advocated unity of action for the good of the world, but does not believe that unity of doctrine or creed is possible. Dr. Jowett's views are quite new to Northfield. At the Grand Council Royal Arcanum meetings in Halifax the election of officers this morning resulted as follows: Supreme rep. Frank Power; supreme alternate, D. G. McAndrews; grand regent, Frank Powers; grand vice regent, G. H. McAndrews; grand tutor, J. Huston; past grand regent, J. A. McQueen; grand secretary, J. T. Allison; grand treasurer, G. H.
