Lumbering Operations. Reports from the streams up country are quite favorable to lumbering operations. The small streams are high, and no difficulty is experienced in getting the logs to the rivers. A rapid rise is noticeable in the rivers, and it is probable that a large quantity of logs will be that a large quantity of logs will be brought down. If, within ten days, a good rain should fall the entire quantity of logs will be brought to market without any trouble. This forenoon a large raft of logs was towed through The Falls by the steamer General. The raft came from Nashwaak and was for Messrs.

Encumbering Streets. Several parties were fined in the Police Court in Portland this morning for encumbering the streets. The same happens very frequently in this city. Yet, otwithstanding the fines, the streets are still encumbered—during the day with boxes, barrels or anything that the different storekeepers cannot keep inside or wish to display outside. At night the parcels are taken in. The police wink at parcels are taken in. The police wink at the obstructions, and people crawl around them and over them day after day and week after week. The court was occupied this morning in the case of the Queen vs. Magee and Henry. The indictment contained two counts, viz., for unlawfully assembling themselves together with others in a manner calculated to terrify some of Her Majesty's liege subjects, and for assaulting Charles Grant on board the British bark Kate Sanc on. The prosecution was conducted by F. A. Morrison, Esq., and W. B. Wallace, Esq., appeared for the defence. For the prosecution the captain of the vessel and mate were examined.
