NICHOLAS MINTURN.

A STUDY IN A STORY.

BY DR. J. G. HOLLAND.

AUTHOR OF "SEVEN OAKS," "ARTHUR BONNICASTLE," ETC., ETC.

Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75 cents.

In this story the author not only has attempted to show the effect upon character, both in the upper and the lower classes, of a loss of self-respect, but he has made,
 in addition, a "Study" of a social problem which may be said to be peculiarly timely.

The elucidation of the pauper and tramp question forms, in fact, a leading theme of the book; for, like Dr. Holland's other stories, this is "novel with a purpose." A large part lies in the relations of Nicholas, the hero, to the "dead beats" of a great city and the extraordinary experiments in their reclamation.

But there are one or two love stories involved, and Dr.
 Holland has given his readers some characters evidently studied from life, and not from books, namely, Mr. Ho-son, who is the tragic figure on the scene, Mrs. Coates, and Capt. Hanks, that "hard-working and slow-taring man."
