CONTROLS

C 202997

Best illustration of differences between Liberals and other parties.

Take Rationing as an example:

a nuisance making life more complicated

BUT

under conditions of temporary scarcity
it does assure a fair share for all.

That is the Liberal case:

controls only where they are needed to assure the priority of the general interest over special interests.

Tory attitude:

Away with controls such as rationing at once.
Let the special interests make a killing;
never mind the public.

Socialist attitude:

Rationing and other regimentation should be permanent
