JUNE hath XXX Days.

1790.

Where scarce had we plac'd it in safety again,

When the finch came delighted to cherish her train.

My Phillis beheld, and with rapture confess'd,

That much might be learn'd from the Bull-finch's nest!

I told her through life it should be my delight,

To copy the precepts display'd to my sight,

And urg'd her that moment to tell me the day,

When at church she should promise to love and obey;

Most sweetly she answer'd, and blush'd like the rose,

I leave that, my shepherd, for you to disclose.

Altho' we've been wed a long summer, or more,

'Tis true that I love her as well as before;

The fury Contention ne'er entered her breast,

She's gentle to me, as the finch to her nest;

Ye swains, when you wander in search of a wife,

I'd have you get such, and you're happy for life.
