OCTOBER.—Farmers, let one or more of your boys learn a trade. Caution them against running off to cities or towns to seek offices or become clerks in dry good or other stores. Any boy that takes a dislike to farming, and has a hankering after what he may think an easier life, is to be watched and cautioned against himself; yes, against himself, for he is in very great danger of running headlong to ruin. Give that boy a trade, don't give him pocket money and intimate to him that he may do as he pleases. The probability is that he will hang round the old house and do nothing for himself or any body else. If there are more boys than can be useful on the farm give some a good trade.
