THREE ODD NUMBERS

PECULIARITIES THAT HEDGE ABOUT THREE, SEVEN AND NINE.

They Have Been Favorite Numerals at All Times All the World Over and Disclose Some Queer Results When Twisted About a Bit.

Nobody has ever satisfactorily accounted for the popular partiality for odd numbers. "This is the third time," exclaims Falstaff, on the occasion of a crisis in his relations with one of the merry wives of Windsor. "I hope good luck lies in odd numbers; they say there's a divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance or death." And it is scarcely necessary to say that the belief is much older than Sir John Falstaff. Three, seven and nine appear to have been the favorite numbers all the world over. The ancients had three fates, three furies and three graces; Neptune's trident had three prongs, Jupiter's thunderbolt three forks, and Coccyus three heads. We have three estates of the realm, a man who accepts a bill has three days' grace, and three persons congregated together may make a riot. Shakespeare was well aware that he must have neither more nor less than three witches in "Macbeth" and that the brinded cat must mew thrice, and our popular folklore insists upon three merry men, three blind mice and three wise men of Gotham. Three meals a day is the usual scale of feeding.

Of a more mystical character than three is the figure seven, or, at any rate, it has a larger number of religious applications. Noah had seven days' warning of the coming of the flood, and when it came he took fowls by sevens and clean beasts by sevens into the ark; the ark touched on Mount Ararat in the seventh month, and after seven days a dove was sent out, followed seven days afterward by another. In Pharaoh's dream there were seven fat and seven lean kine, which Joseph interpreted to mean seven years of plenty and seven years of famine. At the destruction of Jericho seven priests bore seven trumpets seven days, and on the seventh day they walked round the city seven times, after which the walls fell. In the apocalypse almost everything is seven, except the number of the beasts. There are seven churches, seven golden candlesticks, seven lamps before seven spirits, the book with seven seals, the lamb with seven horns and seven eyes, seven angels with seven seals, seven kings, seven thunders, seven thousand slain, the dragon with seven heads and seven crowns, seven angels bring seven plagues, and there are seven vials of wrath.

In merely secular matters seven occurs frequently enough. We have seven wonders of the world, seven champions of Christendom, seven sleepers, seven wise men, seven planets, seven deadly sins, seven ages of man, and our ordinary leases are made for seven or a multiple of seven years.

But however mystically significant three and seven may be, they cannot lay claim to any such peculiarities as the property of the figure nine. That the ancients had nine muses, nine rivers in the infernal regions, a Hydra with nine heads and nine gods for Lars Persena to swear by, or that in modern times a cat has nine lives, that it takes nine tailors to make a man, or that possession is nine points of the law, are facts that pale into insignificance after one has once seen how much the figure nine is discovered by taking any number of two figures of which the first figure is of greater value than the second, reversing these figures and then subtracting the number thus obtained from the original number. Whatever figures we may take, the result will always be 9 or some multiple of 9. The smallest possible number of two figures of which the first figure is larger than the second is 21. Reverse the figures, and we get 12. Subtract 12 from 21, and the remainder is 9. The largest similar number is 98. Reverse these, and we get 89. Subtract 89 from 98, and again the remainder is found to be 9.

Or let us take a case in which 9 combines with the mystic 7. The number 65 is not divisible by 9. But if we add 7 to it, either in front, when it makes 765, or in the middle, when it makes 675, or at the end, when it makes 657, we shall find that every one of these numbers is divisible by 9. It is not every number which can thus be dealt with, and the reader may find an evening's entertainment in trying to puzzle out the reason why. An example of a higher number may be given by way of a little assistance: 896,573 is not divisible by 9, but if the mystic 7 be added to it, either in front, where it raises the amount by 7,000,000, or in any other position, each one of the eight various amounts which may thus be obtained becomes divisible by 9.

The fact can be verified by any child who has mastered the first four rules of arithmetic, but the explanation of it is another matter. To Senior Wranglers or even to Junior Optimus there may be nothing very mysterious about all this. And it may be that if any of us would only put himself through a course of the higher algebra, digest the integral calculus and master a few abstruse treatises on the theory of differences all that now seems so perplexing in the matter would become as plain as the multiplication table.

Order! Order!

The dignity of the house of commons consists in inventing all sorts of childish excuses for shouting "Order!" After a few years of it the average member seems to become a sort of automatic machine "wound up" to shout "Order!" The house would shout "Order!" if the place were struck with lightning, just as mechanically as it shouts "Order!" if a member puts an awkward question to a cabinet minister.

It is a notorious fact that the average government clerk is the most imprudent person found in any class of employment. In proportion to the amount of pay he receives he has more debts than he is unable to meet than the man

Occasionally a wise man assumes the garb of folly for a purpose. Fortune sometimes makes fools of wise men by bestowing her caresses upon them.

The worries of a weak and sick mother are only begun with the birth of her child. By day her work is constantly interrupted and at night her rest is broken by the wailing of the peevish, puny infant. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well. It lightens all the burdens of maternity, giving to mothers strength and vigor, which they impart to their children. In over thirty years of practice Dr. Pierce and his associate staff of nearly a score of physicians have treated and cured more than half a million suffering women. Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free of charge. All correspondence is strictly private. Address Dr. B. V. Pierce, Invalid Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

FARM GARDEN

CARE OF SHEEP.

Rack, With Troughs, For Feeding Grain, Hay or Cut Silage.

Sheep are peculiarly sensitive and will quickly object to feed that has become tainted by coming in contact with their feet or droppings. This is governed somewhat by the degree of hunger, but no sheep will fatten upon feed which it consumes reluctantly. Hence, for best results, feed free from all objectionable taints should be provided. The too common practice of the rangeland of feeding his flocks on the ground is not to be commended. For feeding hay or other roughage this method may be partially successful in arid or semiarid sections, but wherever the ground becomes muddy or befouled with the excrement of animals it will be found to be wasteful and unsatisfactory. This system of feeding on the ground precludes the use of such food stuffs as oats and mill feed. It is a better plan to provide feed racks with troughs attached. Equipped with these, whenever an exigency arises the flock can be economically fed any kind of grain or mill feed. These racks can be constructed cheaply, and many styles of them are in use. The one represented in the cut has been used by the author for a number of years and found to be satisfactory. The racks can be so arranged that feed may be put into them directly from a wagon. If cut silage is fed, this should be put in first, as it will fall through the rack into the troughs. After the silage is properly distributed the racks can be filled with hay.

The rack represented is 12 feet long. The frame is 3 feet 6 inches high and 2 feet 1 inch wide and is made from 2 by 4 inch lumber. The bottom cross-pieces, the upper edges of which are 1 foot 1 inch from the ground, and the two pieces running lengthwise on the upper portion of the rack are framed into the posts. The upper crosspieces are 1 1/2 by 6 inches and are nailed to the outside of the posts. A 2 by 4 inch scantling runs lengthwise in the center of the rack and is framed to the bottom crosspieces. To this is nailed at the bottom a 1 by 3 inch strip for the trough to rest on. Two boards, 1 foot wide and 1 1/2 inches thick, placed each side of the centerpiece make the bottoms of the troughs, and an outside board 1 by 8 inches, extending up 3 1/2 inches above the floor of the trough, completes it. The slats for the rack are 2 1/2 by seven-eighths inches and are placed 2 1/2 inches apart. For outdoor use in a wet climate the rack should be roofed. This is done by nailing three pairs of rafters of the desired pitch on the top of the frame, to which, on one side, one-half inch shiplap, or weatherboarding, is nailed lengthwise. The other side of the roof should be attached with hinges, so it can be lifted up when feed is to be placed in the rack. A one-half by 2 inch strip should be nailed to the eaves so as to form a sort of eaves trough to prevent water from dripping on the sheep while feeding.

When fed in large flocks, the sheep should be driven from the feedyard during the time the racks are being filled. This will overcome the tendency to overcrowding and prevent injury to the sheep from the wagon and team. The quantity of this feed to be fed should be governed largely by the appetite of the flock, but it is not usually advisable to feed over three pounds of silage per head daily. For sheep weighing 125 pounds about 2.5 pounds of silage and 1.5 pounds of hay will be ample, and if one-half pound of grain or bran be fed slightly less hay will suffice. This will depend largely upon the condition of the flock and the severity of the weather. If grain is fed, it is not a proper plan to mix it with coarse feed, as the sheep are inclined to root out and waste this feed in their efforts to get the grain. J. Whitcombe.

Second Thoughts.

On second thoughts, fair Rosalind, you now regret that you declined my ardent suit and scorned my plea with that unmerciful decree: Who for your love in vain had pined.

Long obdurate, no longer me
You look on so disdainfully;
Some pity in your breast you find
On second thoughts.

Alas, had you but thus turned kind
Ere those words heated you left behind,
See from your toils I struggled free
When fairer maid I chanced to see,
But now—no, too, have changed my mind
On second thoughts.

Fishers of Men.

Now, as for me, I took no serious view of matrimony.

"Marry him by all means!" I exclaimed merrily. "For a cod, you know!"

My sister, however, was a far more earnest, thoughtful girl than I. "He is too obviously a lobster for that!" she answered sadly.

Of course I did not much mind, one way or the other.

An Impression to the Contrary.

"Don't you think there is too much disposition to use money in American politics?"

"No, sir," answered the worker. "When I go out after subscriptions to my campaign fund, I am more and more convinced that there is a deplorable disposition to keep the money lying idle."

JINGLES AND JESTS.

A Legend of the Ice Rink.

"Twas a giddy young crowd on the rink that night,
And the hall was a beautiful splash of light,
As he said to himself: 'Just the place for me!
I will join the throng, and I'll enter the scene,
And there's never a chance that they find me out.
At all these young people I'll have a good look,
And I'll enter 'em up in my visitor's book!
I really must take in some more of these sights;
This will surely be one of my busiest nights!'"

So Nick got himself fixed with a new pair of skates
And started at once cutting big threes and eights,
And a nice little girl who was dressed like a charm
Could not bear to say "No" when he offered his arm.
And things were proceeding remarkably slick
For the very choice programme of Willy Old Nick,
When his skate all at once struck a kink in the ice,
And Nicholas dropped on his back in a trice,
And quicker than you could wink Nick Robinson
Old Nick gave his show most completely away,
For the ice all around him steamed, fizled and hissed,
Till Old Nick was completely enveloped in mist.
For the place he had come from was pretty hot stuff,
And he hadn't had time to get cooled off enough.
And the next time that Nick goes prospecting at He'll train up beforehand on cooling ice drink.

They Didn't Know What to Do.

The Rational Argument was especially of the Deadly Parallel.

"You are extremely superficial!" sneered the Rational Argument.
"Certainly, I don't claim to be a parallel!" retorted the Deadly Parallel humorously.

But inasmuch as this pleasantry supported a knowledge of geometrical figures, laughter was not gone—throughout political circles.

His Limit.

"I'm getting along," said Mr. Camrox
"I'm progressing slowly, but surely."
"In what?"
"Culture. I've been traveling around with Mrs. C. and the girls until I'm getting right refined. But there's one thing I don't think I'll achieve. I don't believe I'll ever be able to go into an antique store and tell the difference between bric-a-brac and junk."
