CAMPBELL'S
TONIC
ELIXIR
This agreeable yet potent preparation is especially adapted for the relief and cure of that class of disorders attendant upon a low or reduced state of the system, and usually accompanied by Paleur, Weakness and Palpitation of the Heart, and generally follows its use in cases of sudden Exhaustion arising from Loss of Blood, Acute or Chronic Diseases, and in the weakness that invariably accompanies the recovery from Wasting Fevers. No remedy will give more speedy relief in Dyspepsia or Indigestion, its action on the stomach being that of a gentle and harmonious tonic, exciting the organs of digestion to action and thus affording immediate and permanent relief. The curative properties of the different remedies which the Elixir contains render it useful in Flatulency, Dyspepsia, as a valuable remedy for Acute Dyspepsia, which is apt to occur in persons of a gummy character. It is also a powerful remedy for the various ailments of the Liver, and in cases of Appetite, Indigestion, and in cases where all efforts and certain stimulants to restore the system will be found invincible. In cases of Malarial Type, and the various evils resulting from exposure to the cold or wet weather, it will prove a valuable restorative, as the combination of Cinchona Calissaya and Sarsaparilla is universally recognized as specific for the above-named disorders.

HERE AND THERE.
Some Facts, and a Few Other Good Things.
When a man's nose is "as red as a beet" he usually is one of the following:
Thousands of women bless the day on which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" was made known to them. In all those derangements causing backache, dragging-down sensations, nervous and general debility, it is a sovereign remedy. Its soothing and healing properties render it of the utmost value to ladies suffering from "internal fever," congestion, inflammation, or ulceration. By druggists.
West's Cough Syrup, a certain and speedy cure for cough, colds and all throat and lung diseases.
To Our Readers—If you suffer from head ache, dizziness, back ache, biliousness or humors of the blood, try Barlock Blood Bitters. It is a guaranteed cure for all irregularities of blood, liver and kidneys.
No sufferer from any scrofulous disease, who will fairly try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, need despair of a cure. This remedy purges the blood of all impurities, destroys the germs of scrofula, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the physical organization.
CATARRH CURED. Health and sweet breath secured by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. Nasal Injector free. Sold by John M. Wiley.

THE EDITOR OF A MICHIGAN PAPER says he is a much persecuted man. The village authorities have purchased a street lamp and planted it where its rays fall directly upon his nearest neighbor's wood pile. The editor complains that this last resort to the use of force is thus made too hazardous to be available.
The increasing demand for West's Cough Syrup is a great virtue in all throat and lung diseases. Three times. All druggists.

FAITHFUL—J. R. Faithful, of Stroud, Ont., says he suffers from quinsy for several years, and that he has been cured by the use of Hays' Yellow Oil. The oil is a specific for all painful swellings.
A man whose name would have been good on a cheque for $2,000,000 not long ago spent two hours in the bank office of a Wall-street broker one day last week waiting to get the chance to borrow $10 from one who used to be his clerk. The broker had bought him poverty and made the clerk a millionaire, all within a year or two.

World-wide is the reputation of West's Cough Syrup, the truly marvelous remedy for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, asthma and consumptions. All druggists.
A SEVERE TRIAL—"I tried all the doctors in this locality for liver and kidney troubles, but I had for years with no benefit. Four bottles of Barlock Blood Bitters cured me," says Lemuel Allan, Lisle, Ont.
It is said that when a cigar-maker gets right malicious and desires to do his one player great damage he gets to work on the best brand and then puts a single hair from his head in each cigar. This trick is exceedingly difficult to detect, and will destroy the flavor of every cigar it is applied to with a far reaching injury to the reputation of the brand.
SLEEPLESS NIGHTS, made miserable by a tickling cough, Shiloh's Cure is the remedy for you. Sold by John M. Wiley.

West's Liver Pills, the standard remedy for liver complaint, dyspepsia, indigestion and all ailments of the liver. Sold by John M. Wiley.
WILL YOU SUFFER with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's "Liver Pills" is guaranteed to cure you. Sold by John M. Wiley.
WAS SPOKEN OF—"I can recommend Hays' Yellow Oil very highly. It cured me of rheumatism in my fingers when I could not bend them." H. A. Plank, Scitoway, Ont. A medicine for internal and external use in all painful complaints.
It takes more talent to run one's own business than it does to direct the affairs of an entire neighborhood.
Dr. Pierce's "Pain-Ex" the original "Little Liver Pills" (sugar coated)—cure sick and bilious headache, sour stomach, and bilious attacks. By druggists.
West's Cough Syrup instantly relieves and speedsily cures bronchitis, sore throat and all throat diseases. Try it and be convinced. All druggists.

His Last Resort—Mr. Richard Rowe, of Barley, Ont., was afflicted for four years with dyspepsia. Two experienced doctors treated him, but he was not cured. He tried Barlock Blood Bitters. He states that two bottles cured him. He is now doing heavy work and is as well as ever.
For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Parrot. You will soon learn why polly wants a crack or two—with a club. Try it.

A STRANGE MAN'S LIFE.
Miser James Henry Paine and his Millions—grandson of one who signed the Declaration of Independence—Rich, yet living in squalor and carelessness of his money.
What is here set down is the story of a human paradox—a man whose mental structure was of a most extraordinary sort. Read and see if this is not so: James Henry Paine, who had been well known in Boston as a capitalist, a newspaper man and a man of affairs generally, was blotted out, so far as his friends and acquaintances there were concerned, in 1854, by his own act.
Some time thereafter musical folk in New York began to get acquainted with a very tall, thin man of ripe years, who hung round "Dingwell's," a place of refreshment, much affected by devotion to melody and harmony in the metropolis. He was evidently wretchedly poor and used to eat the leavings he found on the tables in the place. But he knew all about music and could talk about it in a delightful way that made those who heard him open their eyes. So he gradually grew to be a favorite with artists, musicians and publishers in spite of his ways, which were filthy, and his begging for something to eat, which he never stopped till he died.

During all the time James Henry Paine was a frequenter of Dingwell's he never knew how to spend any money in the place but once. Then he had been given five cents on condition that he pay it out for something at once. But there was one thing for which he would at any time spend money, and that was for music. Music was his all in this world, and he would never miss a notable concert or opera. It is even suspected that he had never purchased decent clothes if he could not have obtained admittance to the opera houses and theatres without them.

He was also a great churchgoer, but he only went where the choir were fine. A gentleman who studied him often when he was under the spell of music says: "It was inspiring to watch him. His hand and face, with the big nose and the marked features would grow soft and full of feeling as he drank in the floods of harmony and melody that swept in from across the great auditorium, for he always performed sat way back against the wall. He did not seem to care for the book or the acting on the stage. The music was all to him."
Paine also wrote for musicians often, and, it is thought, contributed to the press—perhaps anonymously—to the day of his death. One of the musicians he wrote for was a young man named Luer, who one day invited him to the house of his parents. From that time the Luer's kept their guest till hard times made them protest, and then he rented an attic room from them, and almost always got a free breakfast from his landlady's table. How he got his other meals has already been told.

It was while he was lodging at Luer's that people in New York began to find out that the old man had money. He complained one morning to Luer that he had been taken from a hair trunk, in which all of Paine's belongings were kept. But as he made no great fuss about it, Luer thought it didn't amount to much. About the same time a theatre ticket speculator found out that the old man had money in plenty, which he would be willing to loan at a ruinous interest, and because from that time on constant borrower. Few others knew about his wealth, though a casual acquaintance once saw a roll of bills tucked carefully in the old man's pocket.
"I'm sicker than all the banks," was Mr. Paine's reply to the remonstrance his heedlessness brought out.

By and by Paine died in the squalid little room he rented from the Luer's. He had fallen on the ice in City Hall park and was taken to a hospital, where he was told that his arm was broken and that his hurts were so serious that he must die or submit to hospital treatment. This he would not do and so the end soon came. When Paine was found after his fall he had on only a pair of army shoes, pantaloons and a shining black coat, buttoned close to the throat to hide the absence of a shirt.

After his death there came an inquiry as to who were his friends, and a man named John H. Wardwell, who thought Paine had money, turned up. Wardwell claimed that Paine had made a will leaving all his money to his "friend John H. Wardwell." Of course there was a contest. Paine's relations in Boston don't want his money to go to any one else, and they deny the making of any will. Wardwell has never produced one, but he has brought forward witnesses who swear to having signed it. The heirs say that Wardwell went to Boston directly after Paine's death and offered to give them half of what was found in the miser's trunk if they would sign away their claims. All but one signed, and was Paine's refusal that finally brought the whole wretched business to light. But only a small sum was found in Paine's trunk, and there is no doubt that some one got away with it ahead of Wardwell. The contest over the administration of the property brought out, however, that Paine had a deposit of $40,000 in the Metropolitan bank, and that twenty years before he had left a bundle with Charles F. Chickering, the piano man, which had lain in his safe untouched ever since. He noticed the heirs and the bundle was examined. It contains nearly $400,000 in bills, only about $30,000 of which was outlawed.
James Henry Paine was the grandson of Robert Treat Paine, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He was born in 1812 in the family residence in Boston and his father was rich. But even in school James Henry was voted "poor." Though bright and sharp. When he was 19 he became musical and financial editor of the Boston Post, and later wrote the money articles for The Traveller. But he was finally discharged from the latter paper because he used its columns to influence speculation in his way. In this manner he made a great deal of money, and, having been left a large fortune by his family, there is no doubt that at one time he was worth at least $2,000,000.
His exposure in this matter and in some other very questionable proceedings drove him from Boston, and he was never known of more by Boston people save once, when a lawyer from that city caused the swindler to be arrested, and
