control of the Privary year since he came on his larm, now ifty-four years; and it has done wonders for him on corn, clover, and grass. The hirst he used was on corn, soaking the corn in water them mixing it with plaster when wet. He planted the plastered corn, and a hired man planted the corn that was not plastered. When the corn was up, that which was plastered was stronger and better coloured than the other. It kept ahead throughout the eason, and when ripe a blind man could have tidd the difference by feeling the stalks and ears. - Chicago Tribuse.

The best way we have ever found of repairing damaged spots in lawns it to trim the edge ovenly, so as to make it a periest Austrian Government of the degree ovenly, so as to make it a perfect square. Remove the injured sod so as to leave an excavation two inches deep, and should there be any holes, fill them up to within two inches of the surface, taking care to make the earth perfectly firm. Then out good fresh sods two inches thick with straight edges and fill the vacancy. Sods nine inches in width and fifteen inches long can be cut easily and quickly with a spade, and will be of a very convenient size for handling. If they are wanted on a steep bank or the side of a terrace, they should be
