On the Loveliness of

Mary. BY ST. ALPHONSUS

Raise your voices, vales and mou

Flowery meadows, streams an fountains,

Praise, ob, praise the loveliest Maiden Ever the Creator made.

Murmuring brooks, your tribute bringing, Little birds with joyful singing, Come with mirthful praises laden-

To your Queen a homage paid. Say, sweet Virgin, we implore thee, Say what beauty God sheds o'er

Praise and thanks to Him be given, Who in love created thee.

Like a sun with splendor glowing, Gleams thy heart with love o'erflowing;

Like the moon in starry heaven,

Like the rose and lily blooming, Sweetly heaven and earth per fuming,

Stainless, spoilsse, thou appearest Queenly beauty graces thee. But to God, in whom thou livest, Sweeter joy and praise thou

When to Him in beauty nearest,

Yet so humble thou canst be.

"Back to the land! Yes, Mary that's the thing nowadays, back to the land, and to the simple life. 'Far from the madding crowa's ignoble strife," said Mr. Rylands, sirily.

"Don't be silly, Dick." "And, as I pointed out in my 'leader' in the Post the other day, in the present overcrowded state of our

His wife shut up her novel with a sigh of resignation.

"You are a provoking dear," she turning lazy blue eyes toward the speaker. "I am not going back to the land; I don't like the land. Cities are quite good enough for me, and I prefer them overcrowded. I like the life and the stir; the shope and the theatres, and all that, Muddy lanes and damp woods and other rural attractions do not appeal to me: so, now, do be sensible, Dick, dailing, and leave the town mouse in her native element."

Dick Rylands lit a fresh cigarette, and blow a few whiff, then he went on speaking in his low, quiet way.

" Now, if you had done me the honor of reading my articla, Mary, you would have brought a much more liberal and chlightened mind to bear upon the sulfect. The advantages of country life, as I set them forth, ary so many and so ot-
