

THE SETTLER.

Afar on the edge of the forest,
The settler's cabin stands,
Of rough logs hewn from giant trees
By his large and sinewy hands;
For well to wield the sharpened axe
The settler understands.

You can hear its heavy, muffled stroke
From morn till close of day,
In the forest close beside his home,
Where the fallen giants lay,
While his good wife minds her busy care,
And his children are at play.

Broad chested, tall and straight are they,
With figures lithe and trim,
The glow of health upon each cheek,
And health in every limb;
The daughters like their mothers are,
But the boys resemble him.

Few other dwellings may be seen The settler's cabin near,
The clearing round about are bare,
And the forest dark and drear,
Where often in the silent night,
The panther's voice you'll hear.

Beside the house his garden lies,
And oft with spade and hoe,
The settler turns the fruitful soil
Where the corn and lettuce grow;
And close beside his garden walls
The gaudy sunflowers blow.

Inside the window's lifted sash
His good wife he can hear Make busy with the noon-day meal
As the welcome hour draws near,
And helping her, his laughter rings,
With sweet voice low and clear.

Within the shadow of the door
His faithful mastiff lies,
With nose between his outstretched paws,
And drowsy, half shut eyes;
While now and then his head he lifts,
To fight the hated flies.

At eve the settler takes his ease—
That ease so nobly won—
In his narrow cabin far away
Toward the setting sun;
And no thought of labor mars his peace
For his day's work is done.

The Braes of Yarrow An Historical Tale of the Sixteenth Century.

'Now mark well what I tell you,' he said, Delivering the packet to Stott, 'Should I fall to return before to-morrow at even, take you the swiftest horse you can find in all the town and bear this despatch to Edinburgh. Tell Captain Lindsay all you know, and fear nothing for yourself. Mind my life will depend on your fidelity.'
'I'll do your bidding, maister, in every particular, and gin ye're no back by the morn's even I'll be in Edinburgh by midnight.'
The man spoke with evident sincerity, and Gilbert, after thanking him, was hurrying away. He was arrested by the masculine voice of Jean Stott, and the protrusion of her huge person in front. Not all the winks and nods of the guidman, could make her understand that something more than ordinary civility was required on this occasion.
'Bide a wee, bide a wee, maister—what are ye makin' a tale of yon' for? John Stott?—there's the lawing to pay afore ye gang—I'll heave a stoup at your head, John Stott, gin ye mak' another face at me.
With some little difficulty discovering how much of this parenthetical address referred to him, Gilbert settled the score so much to Jean's satisfaction that she designated him a 'decent chiel,' which was high praise coming from her lips, for amongst her other characteristics a principal one was a supreme contempt for male creatures in general and her guidman in particular.
The horse was at the door. Gilbert sprang into the saddle and quitted Peebles at full gallop.
He forded the Tweed near Horsburgh Castle, passed through Glenasg, and held on by Glenagaber to Yarrow. The road he had chosen was far from the best; but he was in no humour to spare either his horse or himself, if by an exertion he could gain an hour in reaching his destination.
He skirted Eldinhope and Gilmanacleuch, and by the time he had reached Altrive the day had deepened into a dark gloaming. He took the bridge path through the forest for Tushielaw Tower, following closely the course which afterwards became known as the King's Highway, in consequence of its being the route taken by King James V. on his memorable incursion upon the Border freebooters.
Elliot's teeth were firmly set, but his heart throbbled quickly, for he dreaded to think of what might be the result of his delay. Bitterly he reproached himself for his lack of caution in drinking the wine which had been served him in the presence of a man whose conduct had been so suspicious, and bitterly he reproached himself for thinking of little or sup before he had executed his mission and released his friend.
He hoped, and yet he feared to hope, that some whim or some happy chance had made Tushielaw pause in the completion of his vengeance. But when he remembered the character of the Borderer and the objects which quickened his passion, he felt as if hope were vain. He ground his teeth and spurred his wearied horse forward.
At length Crossie was left behind him, and the gloomy tower of the river loomed above him like a black shadow on the landscape.
Impatiently he urged the horse up the hill and hailed the warden whilst he was still approaching the gateway.
Lights gleaming from loophole and window indicated that there was life within, although the echo of his halloo died upon the night unanswerd.
He reined up and repeated the summons, accompanying it with a clatter upon the gate with the hilt of his sword. Still no one responded but the rapid movement of lights within denoted that he had been heard, and that—whether caused by his arrival or not—some confusion prevailed. Persisting in his clamour he succeeded in bringing forth no less a personage than Pate Scott, the giant.
'What are ye deavin' us for, an' wha the deil are ye?' growled Ding-a-Doon, who was in his surliest humour.
'I bear a message to your master from the King, and I charge you in his name to give me instant entrance.'
'Gin ye were the King himself I wouldna open until it was the master's will. What's your errand?'
'That Tushielaw shall know.'
'By what token am I to ken that ye come frae Edinbro' and are nae spy o' the John-stones or Maxwells?'
'By the token that I, unattended, am willing to trust myself within your den. I will satisfy your chief that I have good warrant for seeking him; so, if ye be not afraid of a single man, I charge you in the King's name open.'
'Afeard?' was the scornful exclamation of Pate; 'gin ye were doubled a bunter times there's nae in Tushielaw would care a bodle for your pith. But I wat ye'se have to satisfy the chief or ye'se no win out as ready as ye hase win in.'
The gates were opened and Gilbert rode into the Court. Armed men were hurrying about with torches in their hands as if preparing for some event; and a number of horses harnessed and ready for the road stood on the west side waiting for riders.— Other horses were being led to the stables, and there was an appearance of bustle and hurry as if one party had just returned from a raid and another was about to start on one.

PUFF. PUFF. PUFF.

THE Man from the Rural Districts, better known as THE FERGUS PUFF BAG, has got off, as he supposes, a good thing by quoting part of an advertisement of mine, and commenting thereon. The public will note the fact that there is no comment on the latter portion of said paragraph, which I will again repeat:

The Kingston Penitentiary Boot and Shoe Store does not pretend to Manufacture Boots and Shoes, neither do we import Goods and pawn them off on the public as Home Made.

The Wellington Shoe Factory advertises to sell none but Goods made in Guelph, which is sheer humbug. Or why expose Toronto and Montreal Goods for sale? It won't do Mr. John A., if there is any honesty in you, and you have any good articles in your establishment, give the credit to those who manufacture them, not to the one-horse affair you call a Manufacture, consisting, by the way, of four men and boys, three girls and a few bits of machinery, "not forgetting the thing without a coat." For Stop Work and Cool Impudence go to the one-horse Factory.

For Stylish, Cheap and Durable Boots and Shoes, go to the Kingston Penitentiary Boot and Shoe Store.

OPEN CONFESSION

THE Kingston Penitentiary Boot and Shoe Store, Guelph, "does not pretend to Manufacture Boots and Shoes," so says the advertisement. (Read it if you want to have a jolly good laugh.) John A. McMillan says that is a fact: the things are indescribable; they may be worshipped without the slightest infringement of the second commandment, and the few unfortunates who got crippled with a mass of uncomfortable wrinkles on their feet, can groan in agony. That is a fact too.

JOHN A. McMILLAN invites the Penitentiary to come to him and he will learn it to Manufacture Boots and Shoes. He wants three apprentices yet, (having already selected three of the six he advertised for the other day) and if it is a good toy, and behaves well, and gives overgulling the public, John A. thinks he can make a man of it yet, though it is rather late to begin.

People of Wellington, note the fact that the Wellington Boot and Shoe Manufacture, Wynham-St., Guelph, "the Old Post Office Block," is the only spot in the whole County, where Boots and Shoes are manufactured extensively. Come and see the Boots and Shoes making, come and see the Machinery at work, come and see the work in progress, come and see the busy hive of industry, and you will go away determined to buy imported work no more.

The Cheapest Boots, the Best Boots, all Home-Made Boots, are to be got at the "Wellington Boot and Shoe Manufacture," Wynham Street, Guelph, "The Fergus Boot and Shoe Store," corner of St. David and St. Andrew Streets, Fergus, and the "Elora Boot and Shoe Mart," directly opposite Kirk & Clarke's Elora.

ALBION HOTEL,
MONTREAL, P. Q.

IN 1857 MR. DECKER purchased the "Albion," which then contained fifty rooms. In 1859 he added a new wing of forty rooms. The steady and rapid increase in the business compelled him, in 1862, to build a second new wing of fifty sleeping rooms, with large dining room, capable of seating two hundred guests. Notwithstanding all this additional accommodation, hundreds of merchants and others, patrons of the "Albion," have been obliged to seek accommodation elsewhere during the Spring and Fall business seasons. Encouraged by the liberal patronage extended to the "Albion," the proprietor has built a third edition of ninety sleeping rooms, large parlors, reading room, office, and bar—fronting on McGill Street. Fifty of the sleeping rooms will be furnished and ready for the Fall Trade. In the Spring of 1863 all the improvements will be com. pleted, when the "Albion" will have an entrance on McGill Street instead of St. Paul Street. The charge will be $1.50 per day, as heretofore. Sept. 8. daw
