SCIENTIFIC AGRICULTURE FOR WOMEN

Vast Possibilities in a Field Monopolized by Men.

What the Woman Might Achieve in a Co-operative System.

Opportunities for Training in Mixed Farming-Interesting Papers Read Before National Council of Women.

A very pleasant social function was the reception given by the teachers of the city and the principal and viceprincipal of the Normal School, to the National Council of Women, last night, in the Normal School. The guests were received by Mr. Little, president of the Teachers' Association, and Mrs. Little; Mr. Carson, inspector of public schools, and Mrs. Carson; Mr. Merchant, principal of the Normal School, and Mrs. Merchant; Mr. Dearness, vice-principal of the Normal School, and the principals of the city schools and their wives. In welcoming the guests in the spacious library, Mr. Little said that in their attempt to make the visitors as comfortable as possible, to relieve the arduousness of their work by interspaces of social communion, to make a company of strangers into a society of friends, the teachers of London were simply following out their own feelings of regard, sympathy and affection for the mem-bers of the National Council of Wo-Between the work which they had laid out for themselves to do, and that of the great body of teachers, there was a very close and intimate relation. "To see the women of the nation," concluded Mr. Little, "among whom, too, and at whose head are many whose names and character are so illustrious and revered by the people, united together without distinction of nationality, language, creed or sect, in the great work of the moral reformation of the nation itself, is indeed an inspiring sight." Lady Taylor replied in a few well-addresses were given by Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Cleland and Mrs. Hoodless. A DAINTY LUNCH. The guests then repaired to the gymhosen and graceful words, and short social hour spent. The guests visited the various points of interest in the building.

The meeting in the evening—a public one—was held in the auditorium of the school, a handsome room that lent itschool, a handsome room that lent it-self readily to the efforts of its decorat-ors. Very few of the seats were left unoccupied. Lady Taylor seized this as a good opportunity to read Lady Minto's letter dealing with the Vic-toria cottage, hospital scheme. She anounced that Lady Minto wanted the ladies of Canada to take cards to be used in the plan to raise money and have them filled. Already there was $15,000 in the fund.

$15,000 in the fund. Mrs. Boomer moved, seconded by Mrs. Arthur, of St. John, that a committee be formed in each council to carry out Lady Minto's request.

AGRICULTURE FOR WOMEN The account of the Women's International Agricultural and Horticultural Union, which was presented most charmingly by Mrs. Fitzgibbon, of Toronto, suggested many ideas that are ot commonly held, strangely enough too, for as uncovered by Mrs. Fitzgibbon, they were reasonable. The union that she represented was the outcome of the international congress of women held in London in 1899, and the idea of it emanated from Mrs. Emma Shafter Howard, of California, who was struck by the amount of information and help that she received at the meetings or agriculture and horticulture. The union's object was to advise as to training and make known openings for employment, and for disposal of proluce; to uphold the highest standard of work and to secure an adequate rate of payment for women engaged in any of the indicated lines. It aimed also toward inducing those members the Atlantic to the Pacific. In this under training to make their course of study as complete as possible. For the woman who had thoroughly equipped herself for horticulture, there were splendid possibilities. There seemed a chance also that for educated women, trained in dairy work review. a chance also that for educated women, trained in dairy work, poultry farming, and other departments, opportunities would arise that had not been realized hitherto; to secure such chances women must have practical training and at present the means of raining, and at present the means of rocuring this were few. The system must be thorough. Many advantages were to be derived from being a part of the international union. On this continent we were young people. In the older countries of Europe, education in every department had progressed for hundreds of years, and there was no question as to the advantages to be derived from studying the agricultural methods in countries like Belgium, Denmark and others. This year, for instance, in the British Isles one million pounds worth of butter was consumed, which came directly from Siberia, for the reason that Danish dairy experts had been procured by the Russian Government to teach the Russian peasants have to make and neck butter for the how to make and pack butter for the English market. Why could we not capture the markets within our own empire? We had as good pasture lands as Siberia, and we should have as good butter to put on the European markets. The writer's idea was that the soon-

In advocating agriculture and horticulture for women they were not encouraging a profession, which, to use a popular phase, would "unsex them," and inaugurate a state of affairs that was undesirable. Agriculture was the basic industry of Canada, and for years women had been deliberately educated away from the soil. The mothers and wives of Canadian farmers have, as a general rule, found that life on the farm meant drudgery, a monoonous round of duties in a narrow n every other profession. The affinity between mother earth and the woman was tremendously strong, and with all that had to do with the growth and raising of stock, with the thousand and one living products of earth and nature about the farm, the woman's maternal intuition was to her a most valuable power. If was to her a most valuable power, if by a remarkably forcible and epi-trained business faculty there would "Household economics as a subject have been many less mortgages on for social study circles," by Mrs. Ada Canadian farms in days gone by. the existing custom followed in the division of property did not have some-The writer did not know whether vision of property did not have some-thing to do with the desertion of the farm by the woman. Usually at the father's death, the farm was left to the brothers, and the sisters had to shift for themselves, and had they been trained in the practical running of a farm, there was no reason why this state of affairs should not be reversed and the sons left to act as the pioneers in the new world. It would seem also that the federal government would do well to grant small homesteads to the daughters of farmers as well as the sons, in our new lands in our far west and new Ontario. There was no better pioneer in the than a well-equipped woman with a taste for the freedom of life in the world in those far off districts. WOMEN FARMERS IN CANADA. As it was, without the facilities for a good training, and without the cooperation which was so necessary to the success of any enterprise, at the Christadora House, New York, spoke time of the last census there were on "Toiling and Catching Nothing." 11,590 women working their own farms | Miss Carson related some of her own in Canada. This comprised mixed farming, dairy farming, fruit farming, and also there were several orchardists. There was probably nearly 20,-000 women farmers now.

To the question as to what facilities there were at present for the education of women in agriculture, the reply was that the course at the Agricultural College at Guelph was open, and women could and did attend the Dairy School at Ottawa. It was to be hoped that the rumored establishment of an agricultural college for women in Manitoba would become a reality.

The day had come when the possibilities of co-operative farming and nasium upstairs, where lunch tables were tastefully set out, the floral decorations being in crimson and gold, the colors of the Nermal School. Refresh-

CAIRNCROSS & LAWRENCE, Chemists and Druggists,

Agents for London tion of the food supply of the world, that it would tremendously govern the condition of every farmer from connection, the writer felt that women had a great responsibility and a great was daily growing, in the vicinity of our larger towns, for the "special article." There were people who would want to examine and see for themselves exactly the conditions under which dairy products were produced and their tables supplied, and in this there was a great opening for co-op-erative farms, worked by women. There was no industry in the world that had so many valuable bye-products as mixed farming, which was the true industry representing the economies of the soil, and there was no spot on God's earth where the ministrations of an intelligent woman were of such importance. TRAINING FOR WOMEN. Miss Fowler, of Winnipeg, followed with a splendidly prepared paper on the subject, "Agricultural Training for Women.

"In the west, more than anywhere else," she wrote, "the farmer looks to his wife for inspiration and guidance. If by special training and teaching we could evolve the right kind of woman, there will be no further difficulty in convincing farmers that agriculture requires brains as much as trades or the professions. Let us, er they persuaded well-educated, clear-sighted Canadian business women to organize and control these industries, organize and control these industries, and devotion and industry. * * * It is now generally acknowledged by those agriculturists who have studied the question, that women can make a living by pursuing the lighter branches of agriculture. Bee keeping, poultry keeping, and small fruit farming bring back a plentiful return, though it is difficult to make a living out of any of these branches exclusively. * * * In Europe agriculture and horticulture are taught apart from domestic economy; in America, the teaching is combined. * * * * If the women employed on farms, had some combination among themselves, if they had instruction furnished them by governcircle, and for daughters, they have felt the need of a wider field. The farm, properly understood, would furnish that wider field, but while we had ulus to their minds and more rest to insisted on having skilled labor in their bodies. * * * * The moveevery calling, we had been content to ment in Manitoba has begun, and the regard farming as a game of hazard, government is appointing a commisand then wonder why rural life seemed sion to inquire (a) into what has been so uncongenial as compared with ur- done for agricultural education in ban life, where, to make a living, Europe and America, (b) to receive skilled labor is insisted upon. What evidence from all persons or societies the union was striving to accomplish, in the province interested in the was to ask agriculturists and workers of the soil to bring to that dignified the government. * * * * As one of and health-giving occupation the same skill, learning and intelligence reason to hope that an agricultural as are daily becoming insisted upon college or school in connection with the university will be started, and a
