Ottawa, April 6. — At the opening of the House, Hon. Clifford Sifton took up the Grand Trunk Pacific debate. He proved the Government's position in regard to the financing of the road to be a safe and correct one, and resented the insinuation that the Gov-when the St. Lawrence, opens, they ernment had intended to go to the country on the strength of the deposit of bonds and so deceive the country.

On the contrary, the Government had the strength of the deposit works of St. John, N. B., who is in the city, has refused to sign the confidence of the contract. On the contrary, the Government had refrained from any statement from the time of the bond deposit until the application for modifications. The charge that it was a conspiracy of silence was the contrary, the Government had tract with the United States of Company, and notified the representatives of the company that he had tract with the United States of the company and notified the representatives of the company that he had tract with the United States of the company and notified the representatives of the company that he had tract with the United States of the company and notified the representatives of the company that he had tract with the United States of the company and notified the representatives of the company that he had tract with the United States of the company that he had tract with the United States of the company that he had tract with the United States of the company that he had tract with the United States of the company that he had tract with the United States of the company that he had the compa General to grant dissolution upon a false platform. The Government had nothing to take back in regard to its statements to take back in regard to its statements of last year, that the railway was going to be a paying enterprise. The trouble was that the shareholders of the Grand Trunk did not have the same faith in the country as the Government had, and the concessions made and pro-visions inserted to reassure those shareholders were an earnest of the Govern-ment's continued faith in the paying pospects of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Government control of rails, he maintained, was secured by the clause in the contract which declared that the Gover-nor-in-Council or railway commission shall have control of rails, and Parliament would pass an act compelling the commissioners to exercise that control. The Grand Trunk Pacific can never raise the question of vested rights. That was owing to the contracts. He admitted that the capitalization of a railway, in the matter of issue of bonds, affected the power of the Government to control rates. But, in regard to stock, it was different. Every man who bought stock did so in the face of the express provision of the contract that there is to control of rates.

Continuing, the Minister of the Interior declared that the company must not only build the western section, lease the eastern and equip the entire road, but must bear the responsibilities of furnishing the money to run the road. Of the $45,000,000 of stock, preferred and common, the Grand Trunk would have about $32,000,000 to put on the market. Considering that therefore dividends could be paid on this stock, the Grand Trunk would have to pay interest on the bonds. rent of the eastern division and operating expenses, the company would do very well to get 60 cents on the dollar for this $22,000,000, or $20,000,000 in cash, which was only just enough to buy the rolling stock. That would leave the company with $13,-000,000 of treasury stock on which to raise money for betterments, and it was ob-surd to say that this stock would be given away practically for nothing. He added that the first dollar the Grand Trunk raised on this $13,000,000 of common obligation to the Government; so that Mr. Fielding's estimate that the Government would not be called on to pay more than $13,000,000 or $15,000,000 as its share was completely vindicated. Mr. Sifton denied the statement that the Grand Trunk Pacific could get out of its obligation to spend $20,000,000 on rolling stock by having it supplied by a rolling stock mpany. He treated this suggestion as utter nonsense, arguing that no company would advance rolling stock upon it under the present contract. The Government would have a first and second mortgage. Mr. Sifton also dismissed as absurd the suggestion that the second mortgage bonds of the Grand Trunk Pacific would be put upon the market at a sacrifice. As the Grand Trunk would have to guarantee interest on such bonds, he thought it pretty safe to assume that the com pany would see no more were issued than were absolutely necessary. Dealing with the revision of the contract, Mr. Sifton Oshkosh, Wis., April 6. - Rev. Carl said the company was desirous of ac cepting the contract as it originally stood, but, strong as it was, it could not finance the enterprise under such strin gent conditions. He was prepared to admit that the present was a better contract for the company than the first one. Nevertheless, the concessions granted were not serious, and the bargain had been the means of alienating from the Grand Trunk Railway Company men, who had been identified with it all their lives. Some of these men had disposed of their stock at a considerable sacrifice Messrs. Haggart and Oeler replied for he Opposition, the former maintaining that the road could not compete with the St. Lawrence route in the carying of grain. He thought the money should be put into the extension of the Interlonial to the Pacific.

Mr. Osler devoted himself to a criticism of the financing of the road, claiming that the G. T. P. had much the better of

The very best grade of iron, skilled workmanship, and the very latest improvements make Oxford Radiators the most satisfactory to install.

They are designed on lines which give a free channel for the flow of water or steam, thus keeping the radiators at an even temperature throughout the building and operating with perfect silence.

The Oxford Hot Water Boiler is constructed in horizontal sections of cast iron. The first section is near the fire, thus heating the water quickly and making the temperature easy of regulation.

Our entire plant at Toronto Junction, coveri g many acres of ground, is devoted exclusively to the manufacture of Oxford Hot Water and Steam Boilers and Oxford Radiators We would like to send you some of our booklets about the Oxford Hot Water and Steam Systems of Heating-they tell the whole story.
